Economic Council Warns:

Social Payments Fanning Inflation

● Grocery prices down; living cost still up. Page 41.

OTTAWA (UPI) — Government payments to individuals, from welfare to old age pensions, are growing at nearly twice the sustainable rate and should be curbed, the Economic Council of Canada said Wednesday.

Council chairman Andre Reynaud said the advisory body's analysis of the economy showed this was the one area where government policies were out of line with the economic guidelines proposed by the council last year.

"Transfer payments in the last two years have been growing at nearly 20 per cent a year, and this clearly cannot be sustained," he told a news conference. "We think there must be some room for a reduction in the rate of increase."

He said the increases, running at nearly 20 per cent the past two years compared to the council's recommendation of 10 per cent, would not lead to "an overnight catastrophe" but in the long run would force higher taxes, inflation and cutbacks in other government programs.

Reynaud said the council was not recommending cutbacks in specific programs but was urging that $5 or $6 billion be trimmed from the expected payments of $36 billion over the next three years.

He said the council's function was to call the public's attention to the situation so governments and their constituents would be aware of it.

Prisoner Exchange Agreed in Desert

Egyptian and Israeli generals agreed in a desert meeting on a prisoner exchange and other issues, with the prisoners to begin going home this morning. The generals sealed the deal by shaking hands and swigging whisky straight from the bottle.

The prisoners were to be flown between Israel and Egypt via Cyprus, a United Nations spokesman said in Cairo. The exchange is expected to take six to eight days.

Israel apparently holds about 30 times as many prisoners as Egypt.

The accord, reached Wednesday in a tent on the road to Cairo, wrapped up five of the six clauses of the United States-sponsored truce agreement signed last Sunday.

The two sides have yet to agree on starting talks regarding proposed withdrawal to the ceasefire lines of Oct. 22, the date the first UN call went out to stop shooting.

Other points settled Wednesday, the UN spokesman said in Cairo, were:

● The turning over to UN emergency forces Israeli checkpoints on the road between Cairo and the city of Suez.

● Free flow of relief supplies to the city of Suez, an encircled Egyptian city on the west of the Suez Canal at the southern terminus of the waterway, and evacuation of wounded and civilians from the city.

● Shipments of non-military supplies to Egypt's 3rd Army, encircled on both banks of the canal in the area of the city of Suez.

Ottawa Calms U.S. Oil Fear

CP, UPI

NEW YORK — Trade Minister Alastair Gillespie promised U.S. businessmen Wednesday that Canada will not bow to any Arab pressures to reduce oil products exports to the United States.

And in Ottawa, Energy Minister Donald Macdonald denied Wednesday night U.S. reports that American-owned oil was being unduly delayed in shipment through Canada.

Gillespie's comments underlined Prime Minister Trudeau's statement in the Commons Tuesday that "we will not alter our foreign policy or our good relationship with the Americans under any pressure from outside."

"Despite our own energy problems and some not-too-subtle pressures from some of our own foreign suppliers, Canada has continued and will continue to do what we can to help the United States meet its energy needs," Gillespie said in a speech to the U.S. national foreign trade convention in New York.

"To those who would question the capacity of Canada to withstand political pressures from other countries, pressures that would try to influence our foreign policy or how we choose our friends, let there be no doubt about Canada's determination to continue to supply her traditional trading partners and friends," Gillespie said.

"Canada does not, and will not, hold her friendships up for ransom."

The minister also stressed, however, that the government will ensure domestic oil needs are met before exporting surpluses to the U.S.

Referring in particular to reports from Detroit and Buffalo that shipments were being held up in Canada, Macdonald said in Ottawa:

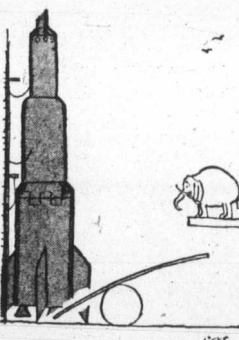

"There are no known cases of any undue delay in such shipments."

However, he stressed the distinction between authorized exports or trans-shipments of U.S.-owned oil and the demands filed each month by prospective U.S. customers for shipments of Canadian oil products.

He said it was "long-standing Canadian policy" that the National Energy Board only permits exports of oil which it

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — The launch of three Skylab 3 astronauts on Friday will consume great gulps of energy at a time when the rest of the United States is desperately trying to conserve it. (See also Page 58.)

The Saturn 1B rocket will require 41,500 gallons of a kerosene-type fuel known as RP-1, and the second stage will burn 64,000 gallons of liquid hydrogen to boost the craft into orbit.

U.S. Customers Upset By B.C. Gas Increase

Major U.S. importers of B.C. natural gas expressed shock and dismay Wednesday over announcement of increases in the wholesale and export price of the gas.

Their reactions came as two agreements were filed with the National Energy Board in Ottawa, raising the wholesale price of natural gas within B.C. to 58 cents a thousand cubic feet from 32 cents.

One agreement is between Westcoast Transmission Ltd., the primary natural gas carrier in the province, and B.C. Petroleum Corp., an agency set up by B.C. legislation proclaimed last week.

The second involves Westcoast and B.C. Hydro, the main natural gas distributor in the Lower Mainland.

About 70 per cent of all gas produced in B.C. is exported. There are indications the export price could go to about 63 cents per thousand cubic feet based on an export formula that requires foreign buyers to pay 105 per cent of the going rate in the province.

This would involve an increase of about 81 per cent.

In the U.S., two officials of Northwest Pipeline Corp. of Salt Lake City, Utah, the company which purchases 62 per cent of all B.C. natural gas, said they were shocked at the announcement. They said they had gone to discuss security of supply of B.C. gas with NEB officials in Ottawa.

Something Smells

What's going on here? Well, a Seattle garbage man recovering from week-long drunk was blamed Wednesday for plight of those Seattle firemen shown in action Tuesday. Firemen found themselves probing tons of smelly garbage at refuse station after garbage man had reported he had dumped two women into pit along with load of refuse. Some 45 minutes was spent poking into garbage before it was determined story was just a hoax.

Sacking of Cox Illegal—Judge

'Begging' Sharp Rebuked

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. federal Judge John Sirica Wednesday gave President Nixon the go-ahead to make public any Watergate evidence he pleases — a tack Nixon reportedly is anxious to take to prove his innocence in this scandal.

But almost simultaneously, another federal judge ruled that the firing of special prosecutor Archibald Cox — done on Nixon's orders Oct. 20 because he pushed too hard to get secret presidential tapes and documents — was illegal. There were these other developments in the Watergate case:

● Several Republican congressmen, after meeting with Nixon in the morning, said he is eager to make his story public and would release information from his private tapes and papers if Sirica approved.

● Sirica, chief judge of the U.S. District Court here who has been handling the case, filed a "memorandum" saying Nixon need not seek his approval before submitting any evidence to the grand jury or the public if he chooses.

● U.S. District Judge Gerhard Gesell ruled in a suit brought by Ralph Nader and three members of Congress that Cox had been "illegally discharged" by acting Attorney-General Robert Bork.

● Senator Sam Ervin, chairman of the senate Watergate committee, turned down a reported offer from Nixon to meet with him and the committee vice-chairman, Howard Baker. "I'm not going to the White House without the entire committee," Ervin said.

● Officials of Ashland and Gulf oil companies told the Ervin committee how they had bowed to pressures from Nixon campaign officials and illegally contributed $100,000 each from corporate funds to Nixon's re-election effort.

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian participation in the United Nations Emergency Forces was approved by the Commons Wednesday, but the Conservative external affairs critic launched his strongest attack yet on the government's foreign policy.

Before Claude Wagner (PC—St. Hyacinthe) began his attack, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said Canada has received a request for more men to provide air support for UNEF in the Middle East.

Wagner said Canada must be willing to serve on UNEF when asked, but should not beg as Sharp had done. Sharp had "rushed" down to the UN when Canadian involvement in the force came into question, he said.

SWEDISH 'N-DISASTER'

It Was No Mock Panic

STOCKHOLM (Reuter) — An inquiry began Wednesday into a Swedish radio broadcast of a mock nuclear disaster which caused panic in southern Swedish cities and in the Danish capital of Copenhagen.

Residents of the city of Malmö fled to underground shelters and jammed police and fire station switchboards with telephone calls after a children's program announced there had been an explosion at a new nuclear reactor being built nearby.

In the program ambulance sirens wailed in the background, reporters said tens of thousands in the greater Copenhagen area were in deadly danger and an actor portraying the mayor of Malmö appealed to the population to seek refuge.

A Copenhagen newspaper reported that some Swedes fled by ferry to Denmark to escape the imagined holocaust.

Later, the radio broadcast an explanation and an apology.

"We thought we had taken sufficient safeguards, but we obviously had not," commented program chief Stig Olin.

Inflation Warning

the implications of the increases. He said the public might decide that more payments to individuals were its "number one priority above all others" and in this case, the government should go ahead with them.

The chairman also urged governments to continue the moderately expansionary fiscal policies of earlier this year and said the increase in the expected federal deficit recently announced by Finance Minister John Turner was "not desirable." He said the past year had been "exceptional" in terms of inflation and he expected that price increases would settle down to a "reasonable forecast" of about four per cent annual increases in about two years. But he noted there were "a lot of uncertainties, including energy."

In its 10th annual review, the government's advisory body on medium and long-term economic policy urged federal and provincial governments to work together to achieve stable economic growth over the next three years.

The council said policies should be aimed at keeping Canadian inflation equal to or below an index based on the average rates of the United States, United Kingdom, West Germany, France, Japan and Italy. After running below that average from 1968 to late 1971, the council said Canada had a higher rate over the last two years.

A particular inflationary threat cited by the council was the rapid increase in government payments to individuals — social assistance, welfare, pensions, family allowances, unemployment insurance and so on. Such payments increased 18.4 per cent in 1971 and 19.3 per cent in 1972 and are likely to increase at least that fast this year.

The council, which previously had urged a 10-per cent increase in these payments, said the increase from 1973 to 1976 should be kept down to at least the 11-per cent level of the 1960s. A faster rate of increase would lead to tax increases and aggravate inflation.

"We wish to emphasize that we are not opposed to social security programs in general, nor to any program in particular. We are opposed to an increase in transfer payments that is too rapid, especially in a period of strong economic activity," the council said.

The council said the government fiscal policy of running a moderate deficit to stimulate economic activity was "about right" but cautioned that further stimulation would "tend to aggravate inflationary pressures, while not necessarily bringing about an appreciable reduction in the number of unemployed."

considers surplus to Canadian needs. Prospective exporters file requests each month for exports in the following month.

"Because of shortages in the United States, the NEB is currently receiving applications for exports which are in excess of the amounts calculated to be surplus to Canadian needs," Macdonald said.

He added that the board "has no authority as to which U.S. customers have priority in receiving the available supplies" and that "pre-payment by prospective U.S. customers to Canadian suppliers does not preclude the requirements for NEB licensing."

"The Canadian government and the NEB are prepared to do the utmost to meet the wishes of U.S. customers, but exports have to be within what is clearly defined by the board as surplus to Canadian needs," Macdonald said.

"Canada is also being affected by international events and faces supply problems in eastern Canada this winter."

B.C. Boost Upsets U.S. Customers

of violating the spirit of existing export contracts. Northwest is in the process of taking over Westcoast's export contract from El Paso Natural Gas Co. of El Paso, Texas, the sole U.S. buyer of B.C. gas.

In Portland, Ore., another Northwest spokesman said the customer will ultimately pay for any increase in the wholesale price of B.C. natural gas.

"Certainly, no distributor, such as Washington Natural Gas or ourselves, could afford the cost," the spokesman said.

A spokesman for Washington Natural Gas Co., which buys Westcoast gas through Northwest Pipeline Co., said his company had been caught unaware by the price increase announcement.

He said the average increase for residential customers may be about 11 per cent and the average increase to large, interruptible customers may be 35 per cent.

Donald Brazier, chairman of the Washington state utilities and transportation commission, said the increase would mean a jump of $80 million in the amount of money paid at the border for imported Canadian natural gas.

B.C. Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said the agreements filed in Ottawa mean the province, through the B.C. Petroleum Corp., will receive "the true commercial value" for its natural gas.

The price increase, announced Tuesday by Westcoast, followed recommendations by the B.C. Energy Commission.

Macdonald declined to say how much the increase will be at the consumer level but said price boosts are likely for industrial users. He refused to estimate how much.

In Vancouver, Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer, a director of B.C. Hydro, said there would be "very little" change in price for residential users.

This was in line with the policy stated by Macdonald when he introduced the Petroleum Corporation Act on Oct. 12.

He said then the intent of the bill was to allow the government to become involved in the marketing of natural gas to both domestic and U.S. users.

It would be the policy of the government, Macdonald said at the time, to "protect the domestic consumer" from higher prices.

But he warned that export prices would be increased considerably.

In Ottawa Wednesday, Macdonald repeated that the export price of B.C. natural gas would be raised. He said this could be done within the terms of existing contracts with U.S. customers.

The B.C. government, meanwhile, disclosed cabinet orders passed Tuesday that named James Rhodes, chairman of the energy commission, as head of the petroleum corporation. Macdonald and energy commission counsel Martin Taylor were also named to the corporation.

● Strict implementation of the ceasefire.

Despite the headline, an Israeli military communiqué said the Egyptians opened fire with small arms repeatedly along the canal front. At one point, the communiqué said, Egyptian soldiers advanced toward Israeli lines "after being warned by the United Nations" ceasefire observers. The Egyptians were repelled, the communiqué said.

Toward evening an Egyptian tank shelled Israeli forces north of the Great Bitter Lake and the fire was returned, the communiqué said.

The agreement on prisoners and other points was reached by Maj.-Gen. Aharon Yariv of Israel and Lt.-Gen. Mohammed Gamazy of Egypt during a meeting at Kilometer 101 on the Cairo-Suez road.

Yariv rose, smiled broadly after the agreement and extended his hand to Gamazy.

Gamazy looked nonplussed. Then he rose, too, said "Why, not?" and shook Yariv's hand.

Conscience Pangs

By G. C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am writing to you because I cannot go to the doctor I have had for so many years and let him know how I made a fool of myself.

I am 74 and my husband died 10 years ago. My children are all married and in homes of their own. At all times I have tried to be a lady wherever I was.

Three months ago I met a man who had lost his wife a few months before. He took me out several times and was always a perfect gentleman. Then we went dancing and had some drinks, perhaps too much, and he took me home where I live alone because I became sick, so he stayed to take care of me.

When I woke I was still sick and when he suggested sex I wasn't up to fighting him off, and I consented as he had been so kind to take care of me and clean up after me.

The whole next week I didn't feel good, almost sick, and haven't felt good since. What might happen? It was 10 years since I had sex or went with a man. If I were younger I would think I was pregnant. What is the age of the oldest woman who ever had a baby? —R.E.

I know of no pregnancy of a woman older than her early 50s, and those are very rare, so put that out of your mind.

I suspect that your trouble is totally in your conscience; you feel that you weren't, that night, "a lady." But I cannot see that you harmed anyone and it's high time you put what's past behind you and forgot about it.

Bridal carriage returns to Buckingham Palace with royal newlyweds

Honeymoon in Barbados

LONDON (CP) — A happy and relaxed Princess Anne, now Mrs. Mark Phillips, spent her first honeymoon night at the home of her mother's cousin in suburban Richmond Park before flying to Barbados today for an 18-day cruise.

The wedding-night destination was to be a secret but court reporters said Wednesday that Anne and her new husband were at Thatched House Lodge, a white residence set in the rolling terrain of the royal park, home of Princess Alexandra.

They fly to Barbados today to board the royal yacht Britannia to cruise in the Caribbean before Mark takes up his duties as a military instructor.

The Queen and other members of the royal family joyfully hurled rose petals as the couple left Buckingham Palace in an open horse-drawn carriage — Anne in sapphire-blue velvet dress and jacket trimmed with white mink and a white mink hat and Phillips in a grey suit.

The moment marked the end of the biggest royal fiesta Britons have seen in years. The queen is expected to pick up the wedding tab estimated at $250,000.

Anne, Mark Cheered By Hysterical Crowd

After a short drive through the gathering November dusk, Anne and Mark transferred to an automobile at the back door of the Royal Chelsea Hospital, home of the famed scarlet-coated Chelsea pensioners.

Almost as if the weather were in league with the wedding organizers, it clouded over as soon as Anne and her handsome army officer had appeared on a Buckingham Palace balcony to hysterically cheering crowds — who chanted "We want Anne" and "We want Mark" and would not stop yelling until they came back a second time. The royal family also briefly joined the couple on the balcony.

Until then, it had been brilliant royal bride's weather for November, with sunshine and a blue sky over the jingling pageantry of coaches and scarlet-clad cavalry. Hundreds camped out overnight to get a good view of the processions and by 11 a.m., when the queen's procession left the palace for Westminster Abbey, up to 30,000 sightseers jammed Parliament Square, hanging on railings and waving tiny Union Jacks.

Often on recent royal occasions the crowds have been quiet, with just a few waving, but on Wednesday cheers rose from thousands of throats. Britons were determined to enjoy this splash of glamor before the threatened power cuts and strikes of winter took effect.

But for all the splendor, the gold-robed archbishop and clergy, the ranks of foreign royalty and the glittering military style of the wedding in 900-year-old Westminster Abbey, it was at heart a family affair. The queen has rarely seemed so unrestrainedly delighted as she was when leaving the abbey — happy on this day to be thoroughly upstaged by her daughter.

Television audiences round the world saw the 22-year-old princess, in a white silken Elizabethan gown with deep

pointed sleeves and wearing a borrowed tiara — from her grandmother, the Queen Mother, exchange a firm "I will" with 23-year-old Phillips.

The groom wore a glittering scarlet and gold tunic with skin-tight blue trousers and long spurs. He has previously appeared nervous in public speaking, but he spoke up without hesitation Wednesday as he pledged to endow "with all my worldly goods" Britain's most eligible heiress, fourth in line to the throne.

After they were pronounced man and wife by the Archbishop of Canterbury, Most Rev. Michael Ramsey — 69 Wednesday and soon to retire — the young couple knelt before the high altar. It was a solemn moment of dedication but they were plainly so happy in each other's company they seemed to forget all the surrounding pomp and leaned toward each other.

Prince Philip gave his daughter away, honoring his new son-in-law by wearing a field-marshal's uniform instead of his customary admiral's rig. Prince Charles, the bride's brother and heir to the throne wore the uniform of a serving naval lieutenant, with sword.

Even Piccadilly Circus Affected

U.K. Takes Dim View

LONDON (AP) — Britain dimmed its street lighting and cut heating in public buildings Wednesday in emergency moves to meet a threatened shortage of energy.

The government's ban on street and floodlighting was effective at midnight but many firms simply turned off their advertising signs at closing time. Movies and theatres, however, kept their marquee lighting on until the deadline.

Piccadilly Circus, the crossroads in the heart of the capital, was dim in the early evening but far from the blackout level of the Second World War. In nearby Trafalgar Square the floodlights on Nelson's Monument and the National Gallery were off but movie lighting was on.

The government ordered the ban on lighting and a 10-per-cent cut in heating in all public buildings and state-owned industries after declaring a state of national emergency Tuesday.

The action was taken to give the administration powers to deal with a refusal by coal miners and workers in the electricity-generating industry to work overtime. The refusal is part of a protest against wage freezes.

The government apparently held off on the lighting ban until midnight because of the festivities involved with the wedding of Princess Anne, daughter of Queen Elizabeth, to Capt. Mark Phillips. There was also an international soccer game between England and Italy at London's Wembley Stadium and between Scotland and West Germany in Glasgow's Hampden Park.

Home Secretary Robert Carr told the House of Commons Tuesday the miners' ban on overtime was a bid to exhaust the nation's coal stocks through diminished production.

The workers are protesting the government's curbs on pay raises which limit increases to 7 per cent during the next 12 months and block the much higher pay claims from the unions in both industries.

Some Murderers Senator's Friends

OTTAWA (CP) — Senator Earl Hastings (L-Alberta), who counts 30 convicted murderers among his friends, called Wednesday for abolition of all capital punishment.

He made the plea as the senate resumed consideration of the government's controversial bill to renew the ban on capital punishment except for killers of on-duty policemen and prison guards.

No Thanks to Ottawa

LONG BEFORE the Mid-East warring intensified United States oil supply problems there was no question that the Alaska pipeline would be built. This view has been expressed by this and other newspapers at frequent intervals, and the accuracy of it is now borne out.

Plans for the multi-billion dollar project had reached a point of no-return by the time controversy over the environmental threat it posed had got into full swing. Massive sums of money already had been spent. Engineering studies and surveys were complete. The actual pipe, $80 million of it, was on site. And down at Cherry Point in Washington they were getting ready to receive the crude.

It was another case of dollars speaking louder than words, and in applying this to the Alaska pipeline it was not a case of belittling the environmentalists in their fight over construction, but to urge concentration on obtaining safeguards against spills. Any attempt to halt construction was futile, so come down a peg to the question of averting as many dangers as possible, and finding ways to restore the environment in the event of accidents.

And in this, the environmentalists have had some success with the U.S. government. Higher standards of control have been reached, and in the authorization of construction of the pipeline, regulatory agencies are given wider powers. The authorization also contains a strong liability protection clause for which pipeline objectors must also be given considerable credit.

It covers the British Columbia coast, and is, in effect, a $100 million no-fault insurance policy to be used in cleaning up tanker spills and reimbursing anyone suffering damage.

This has been written into the pipeline authorization with no pressuring from the Canadian government which, in the minds of many, should have been demanding consideration of this kind long ago.

It is a gift from the blue for the government at Ottawa which has been blackened with criticism for having chosen to stay as far away as possible from the Alaska oil controversy. External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp did say three months ago that Canada was going to get involved now that "there is something tangible to fight."

It had taken him until late July to see that the pipeline was going to be built, and the "fight" that was beginning would be on tanker traffic through the Strait of Juan de Fuca off southern Vancouver Island shores.

Mr. Sharp said the Canadian government's contention was that the refinery facilities at Cherry Point should continue to be supplied with Canadian oil, and indicated willingness to negotiate a supply guarantee if tankers were sent further south and away from the confining strait area.

It was political talk that might have gone over well with some British Columbians, but it was small talk that the Americans recognized as such. Had they moved on it, where would they be today with Canada threatening to cut off or reduce the comparatively small amount of oil now being piped to Cherry Point? It is only a fraction of what a tanker diversion agreement would have called for. The Middle East troubles are given as the reason for the possible decrease in supply, but they have existed in varying degrees all along.

It is sad that the leaders of this country were unable, up until this past summer, to come to a realization that the mind had been made up in the United States long ago on the Alaska pipeline. It is even sadder that Mr. Sharp made useless sounds when he finally saw the light. It is fortunate there has been talk by environmentalists meaningful enough to move the American Congress into including the B.C. coast in insurance coverage. This lessens the overall gloom a little.

Conditioned

BECAUSE THE B.C. government monopoly car insurance scheme will go into effect with less than a year's preparation, Premier Dave Barrett anticipates that at the outset there will be many foul-ups and problems. But, he says confidently, he also expects that the public will be tolerant—"They're very understanding people."

The premier is right. The people have been conditioned to be resigned to things going wrong. The post office has done a magnificent job of it.

Turning Off Sympathy

POINT ROBERTS RESIDENTS seem anything but enthusiastic about the proposed 3,000-square-mile international park that would include their six square miles of U.S. peninsula protruding from Canada. The land-and-water park straddling the border was recommended recently by a study group of the International Joint Commission, and public hearings on the proposal have been set for early next month in British Columbia and Washington. But many voices have been raised among the peninsula's residents against this concept, and now a state-wide petition campaign has been started.

Furthermore, Whatcom County commissioners have endorsed a contemplated 1,880-acre private development on Point Roberts that would include a condominium, apartments, hotels, a marina and a golf course.

It was shortage of water and British Columbia's refusal to start exporting water across the border that lent urgency to the IJC study, and the international park idea would have permitted this and other services to be supplied. To oppose the park and at the same time to approve a big, water-demanding development is certainly not to invite sympathy the next time the point is in need.

The No-noer of Parliament Hill

Think of any good and Christian cause the Commons could support — any worthy crusade Parliament might push — any government action that should be taken in the public interest.

No trick, eh? You can think of a score or more right off the top.

And give you a couple of minutes of thought and you probably could come up with maybe a hundred or so.

Chances are, though, that the Opposition has tried them all, and more, for size on the government, but they didn't suit the administration's state or mood, and so they never got a fitting.

They were almost all — an average 99 out of every 100 — nay-sayed by Kenora-Rainy-River Liberal MP John Reid, parliamentary secretary to government House Leader Allan Rock.

Seldom, if ever, the parliamentary day passes that one or more members of the Opposition doesn't ask, at its opening, for the unanimous consent of the House to do this, that or the other thing, all in the name of the public interest.

By RICHARD JACKSON, Colonist Ottawa Bureau

It is just as routine, too, for the MP asking this unanimity of approval to preface with a shot at the government for doing or not doing something that inspires his motion.

Taking these shots at the government violates the rules, but the MP usually gets them off before Mr. Speaker Lamoureux can order him to hold his fire.

So partly for retribution, and partly for a whole lot of other reasons, somebody on the government side of the House has got to deny the MP the unanimity to proceed.

John Reid is the one who sings out "no" and kills whatever idea the Opposition MP had going.

The Opposition calls him "Dr. No," after the infamous heavy in the late Ian Fleming's first James Bond classic.

And in his villainy — as the Opposition views it — John Reid has become nearly as skilled as "Dr. No."

He doesn't like vetoing what he calls all these "mother-

'hood motions" of the Opposition, because, for one thing, who knows but that some of the voters up in the galleries of the House could catch him thumping them down.

So "Dr. No" masks his "no," shouting it out from behind his hand, or when he appears to be staring at the patterned linen ceiling, poking into his desk with the top up, shuffling through his papers or even chatting with a common colleague.

Whatever he may be doing, he pauses for the mini-second it takes to yell "no."

Some members of the Opposition regard him as a puppet on House Leader MacEachen's string.

Mr. MacEachen hears the Opposition motion, jerks the string, and two seats back Mr. Reid automatically in reflex bawls "no."

It is, concedes John Reid, almost — but not quite — that automatic.

When he can — when there is time, and there are only seconds for a decision — he waits for a signal from Mr. MacEachen or whichever cabinet minister might be concerned with the Opposition motion.

If there's no signal he operates under the one standing instruction: it shall not pass.

The smart Opposition MP, counsels John Reid, will give him advance warning on the motion and a chance to clear it with Mr. MacEachen or the directly involved member of cabinet.

But few do.

They just pop up and fire from the lip and "Dr. No" guns them down.

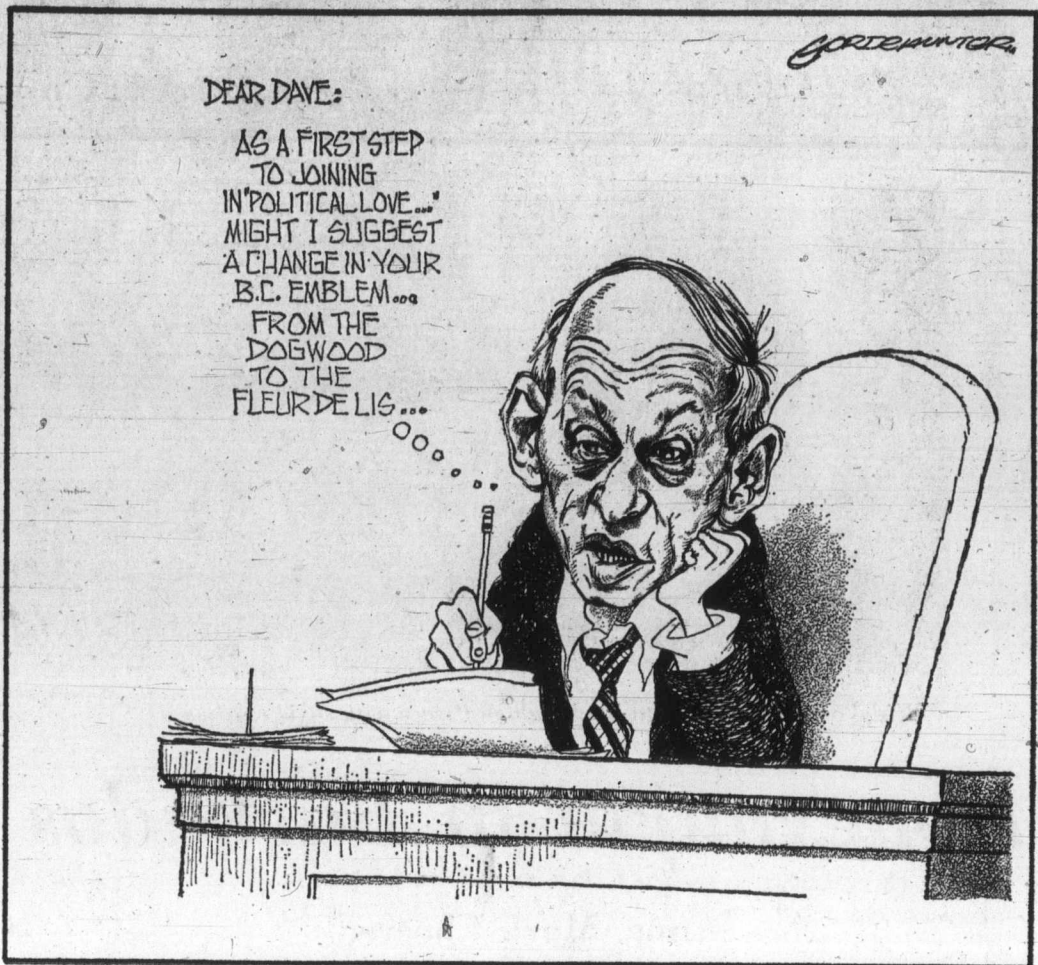

"I'm not against motherhood, actually, you know," he grins. "It's just that it isn't reasonable to expect the 264 members to make up their collective minds, approving or rejecting a motion that could have considerable impact on government policy.

"So to play it safe, it has to be 'no' almost every time."

While they call him "Dr. No," he's sure they all understand that he's merely defending the parliamentary principle that notice should be given on all motions and matters of substance to allow time for consideration.

Even so, he knows that "I'm the guy who is supposed to hate motherhood," and it bothers him.

OUR READERS' VIEWS

Belleville Street For Developers

Please, Mr. Barrett, don't let the city close Belleville Street to help a foreign multinational corporation get rich.

Without the closing of Belleville Street the old Bapco Paint plant site has comparatively low value and could be taken for a superb viewpoint park readily accessible to the public by foot and by car.

The proposal to close Belleville Street means that in reality Victorians will have to use the back door excepting that Victorian peasants will have the honor of paying for a park on the front door primarily to enrich the developers.

To allow building between Belleville Street and the waterfront would be to throw into discard a 20-year plan in the capital region to open up the waterfront to the public and would be a 20-year backward step.

The developers have lots of land to build on behind Belleville Street and since when has it been policy to close public roads to make developers rich no matter how slick their public relations programs?

The Empress Hotel has not suffered by the presence of Government Street and the Causeway. The CPR in its heyday of wheeling and dealing never had the crust to suggest that Government Street be closed and that the city maintain a park on its front doorstep. So why in this day and age should roads be closed for another developer?

Please, Mr. Barrett, don't force Victorians to use the back door. Keep Belleville Street open and buy the waterfront for all the people of British Columbia to use and not by way of the servants' entrance.

HUMBLE LOCAL PEASANT.

Gospel Callers

Is it not time that some of the evangelical militants who wish to save the rest of us, one by one, were themselves taught the gospel of good manners?

I refer to the door-to-door purveyors of the Word, who come to our houses uninvited and usually unprepared to accept a gentle brush-off. I personally have been bothered by any number of these people — mostly Jehovah's Witnesses but others as well, such as the Faith Mission in Canada — who seem to think that I am someone who should be saved. Although perhaps true, I resent that.

No doubt they are spurred on by a genuine and sincere motivation. But why in the name of their "own" Jesus can't they follow one simple and proven doctrine: Mind their own business? If I want to be or need to be saved, I know where I can go.

In the meantime, the next would-be redeemer who comes around to my place when I'm doing something else, without the courtesy of calling first, may himself have to be saved.

M. I. SPIACCI, RR2, Victoria.

The Fund For Vietnam

Some months ago, when Health Minister Dennis Cocke announced the creation of a $2.25 million fund to help the children of Vietnam, he stated in a TV interview that the money would go to help the children of North Vietnam, and then added hastily, almost as an afterthought, "and South Vietnam." One might have assumed that this inferred a 50-50 division of the fund between the Communist North and the non-Communist South.

However, it now appears that $300,000 has been divided equally between the Swedish Save the Children Fund, which operates in North Vietnam; the Quakers in territory occupied by the Viet Cong and the B.C. Save the Children Fund in South Vietnam. The balance of almost $2,000,000 has been placed in trust of a special legislative committee, which is to recommend aid programs "that will provide most effectively for the relief of the children of Vietnam."

In other words, of the $300,000 already paid out, two-thirds has gone to Communists and one-third to non-Communists. One wonders what percentage, if any at all, of the nearly $2,000,000 remaining will reach the children of South Vietnam, who have probably suffered most of all. What will the Viet Cong use the money for? To buy grenades to throw through the windows of South Vietnamese classrooms as they have often done in the past?

If criticized for its paternal bias, an unlikely eventuality in this "never rock the boat" society, the government will probably defend itself with the artful excuse that children are children, no matter where they live or the color of their parents' politics. Although this is no defence against the charge of an unfair division of available funds along political lines, it will probably suffice to silence any criticism.

One expects a government which is Marxist in all but name to apply its sanctions against non-union firms and non-union workers; capitalists and their capitalist pursuits such as golf, but when it stoops to weight the scales of mercy so that the non-Communist children of South Vietnam only receive one-third of the available funds, then its dreadful bias and appalling pettiness are placed on view for all men to note and pity. (Dear Editor.

If you print this, please use the pseudonym. This government owes me a pension. I can't afford to have them cut it off on an obscure technicality. Of course, if I ever win the Irish . . .)

VICTORIAN.

$1 Loyalty Price Tag

We were disappointed and a little bewildered by the letter dated October 30, 1973 from Buchanan Dunsmore in which he proclaimed his intention to resign from the B.C. Government Employees' Union. In his letter Mr. Dunsmore said he was quitting in protest against the provincial government's intention to introduce the Rand Formula under which provincial employees would be required to pay dues to, but not necessarily join, the union representing them under new collective bargaining legislation. However, in a letter (copy enclosed) to the union on September 3, 1973 Mr. Dunsmore threatened to quit the BCGEU, if "membership dues were increased beyond $5 a month at the union's convention October 18-20, 1973. Well, the convention delegates voted overwhelmingly to increase the dues to $6 a month, effective January 1, 1974.

Mr. Dunsmore's letter to us said he was opposed to a dues increase of more than $1 a month. He went on: "I figured out how much I was willing to pay to belong to the union. And the answer is $5 monthly—maximum. Maybe I am the only $5 union man in government service, but then again maybe I ain't, and, as I'm reluctant to terminate membership, I would urge the executive to make a proper, cold-blooded study of the thoughts of all members lest they push significant numbers into leaving, thereby nullifying that which they wish to accomplish, or even endangering the very existence of the union."

It appears to us that Mr. Dunsmore had a price tag of $1 on his loyalty to the BCGEU and the real reason for his resignation was the dues increase not the Rand Formula.

JOHN L. FRYER, General Secretary, BCGEU.

Wrong Word

In your issue of Oct. 25, 1973, I would like to call your attention to some very questionable reporting in the article entitled Gallows Moonlight Dims.

Your correspondent says of John Ellis that "his victims died quickly and painlessly." I submit that the word "victims" is very ill chosen. The individuals subject to the hangman's attentions were the victims of their own conformity to social standards and were led to the scaffold according to the well considered verdict of a jury of their peers.

Far from being victimized by "John Ellis" he was the last human being to render them an act of kindness in that his skill and experience in the unenviable task he performed gave them a quick and painless end to a mispent life.

This type of reporting is on a par with the "conscience" stricken MPs who disregard the wishes of their constituents and allow the nation to sink into a morass of drug-use and violent crime.

C. M. SMITH, P.O. Box 91, Sooke.

Golf Course Benefits

I do not play golf, but I benefit from golf courses—in fact every time I walk or drive past one. So do hundreds of other non-golf-playing Victorians. What would Beach Drive be like without the magnificent open view of the ocean provided by the Victoria Golf Club, or the road to Sooke without the undulating green of the Royal Colwood Golf Course?

I strongly support Alderman Smith of Oak Bay and others who would like to see golf courses included in a green belt area. It has been stated that the Victoria Golf Club already pays $26,000 a year in taxes. This is quite a sizable sum, but nothing like what the municipality would derive if the land were subdivided. Don't let's tax golf courses out of existence, even if the non-players have to pay something towards the pleasure they derive from them.

KATHERINE SHERMAN, 2168 Guernsey St., Victoria.

Hanoi Preparing Massive Offensive

No Attempt Made to Conceal Huge Build-Up of Troops, Armor, Guns

BACKGROUND

North Vietnam is openly preparing to launch its heaviest offensive ever against South Vietnam, and this time the buildup is not taking place in the Cambodian and Laotian sanctuaries but inside South Vietnam.

More than 240,000 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong forces are in the South. Of these about half are main force combat units.

The 600 tanks lost in the Easter offensive last year have been replaced and reinforced by new, highly sophisticated weapons, including 130 millimetre guns and 122 millimetre howitzers.

Monthly supplies estimated to total 16,000 tons of military hardware are coming down the Ho Chi Minh trail and across the beachhead south of the demilitarized zone, where a Chinese freighter recently discharged military cargo in defiance of the ceasefire agreements.

The stockpile of military equipment is so large that Vietnamese and Western intelligence believe the North could launch an offensive as for infinitely higher casualties in the coming offensive.

The northern forces have been spending their military supplies at the rate of about 8,000 tons a month. By February or March, the most likely time for the new offensive, are not yet in battle order however.

They have about 30,000 field troops in the Central Highlands and Military Region Two, another 25,000 west and north of Saigon in Military Region Three, and 20,000 in the Mekong Delta.

It is anticipated that they will need to reinforce these troops, especially in the Saigon area, before launching their attack.

by the government, at the time of the first ceasefire.

The more pessimistic predict an all-out effort to seize Hue, Danang, and Saigon, with the main thrust coming against the capital.

Since the North has always tried to use the element of surprise to advantage, a new Tet offensive is regarded as improbable.

Most military analysts believe that Hanoi will not wait beyond March, when it expects to have seen the Cambodian war resolved in favor of its Cambodian communist allies and will be able to move all the forces in Laos and Cambodia for what it hopes will be the final thrust in Vietnam.

By DENIS WARNER, from Canberra

big as the Easter offensive last year and maintain this level of attack for a year.

Nine months of "peace" have cost the South Vietnamese 11,000 killed and 45,000 wounded, less by far than the casualties during the offensive last year, but close to the figures of the same period of war in 1971.

On the evidence available, the South must be prepared they are expected to have more than 100,000 tons in reserve.

"They've got so much they don't bother to hide it any longer," said a Vietnamese staff officer. "There are huge dumps in the Tay Ninh area."

Except in central Vietnam, where they have 80,000 field troops and several thousand trucks, the northern forces

Europe, U.S. Further Apart

Oil Shortage Likely To Add to Transatlantic Friction

By PETER BUCKLEY, from Washington

The oil shortage may aggravate rather than reduce transatlantic friction, raising fresh questions whether the United States and its major allies can work out a "new Atlantic Charter."

With State Secretary Henry Kissinger in and out of China pursuing super-power diplomacy, the task of trying to patch up the sharp disagreements with Europe has fallen to two of his assistants.

They are Walter Stoessel, assistant secretary of state for European affairs, and Helmut Sonnenfeldt, recently appointed treasury under-secretary after nearly five years as Kissinger's right-hand man on the National Security Council. An American delegation led by the two men have met with NATO officials in Brussels and saw common market emissaries in Copenhagen yesterday.

The state department has acknowledged publicly that there are, to use its euphemism, "sticking points" in the efforts of the United States and its allies, especially the Europeans, to draft common declarations of principle covering economic and defence relations.

Privately, U.S. officials concede that the differences are fundamental. And they have been made more pointed by the unusually sharp disagreements which arose during the recent Arab-Israeli fighting, these officials say.

The United States was plainly furious that its allies let it stand alone on Israel's side and even barred assistance to American supply planes. The U.S. felt its NATO allies should have recognized a Soviet threat to European interests because of potential Soviet influence on Arab oil supplies.

The Europeans believed they were ignored and even deceived, as Washington and Moscow manoeuvred over their heads for a mid-east ceasefire. While an Arab oil embargo would cause mere discomfort to the U.S., it can bring industrial paralysis and social hardship to Europe, they said.

One diplomatic observer here has suggested that the disagreement might not have been so sharp if the Arab oil states had waited another two or three years to cut off oil supplies — until U.S. dependence on Mideast oil had grown substantially. Then, he said, Washington might have more readily understood the European quandary.

The resulting dispute, however, has only confirmed each side in some of its previous opinions.

When Kissinger first proposed discussions toward a "new Atlantic Charter" last April, the European reaction was cool. The Europeans particularly resented Kissinger's suggestion that while the U.S. had "global" responsibilities, the European interests were "regional."

Kissinger is understood to feel now that his point has been proved by the Mideast war.

On the other hand, the Europeans are said to be more determined than ever to resist any Atlantic declaration of principle that stresses such American-supported precepts as "interdependence" and "partnership."

The rift over the Middle East and the lack of consultation between Washington and the European capitals has tended to make a mockery of such ideas at this time, in European eyes.

With the "year of Europe" proclaimed by President Nixon drawing toward a close, the chances of the Atlantic allies ending 1973 on a truly friendly basis look anything but brilliant. An oil-short winter could make it worse.

Cost of War Prohibitive

Leading Lesson Learned in Mideast Conflict

A sweeping revision in military theories is anticipated by Western military experts in Israel as a result of the latest Arab-Israeli conflict.

They say the results of the war will have at least as much impact on concepts of warfare as did the Spanish civil war of 1936-1939, where the blueprints were laid down for such tactics as mass bombings from the air.

The Sinai Desert and the Golan Heights have served as a testing ground both for the movement of large forces and mainly for the use, in battle conditions, of some of the most modern military gadgetry.

The experts say a foremost lesson of the war, even more important than the efficiency of infra-red guiding equipment or ultra-modern missiles, is that the cost of modern warfare is beyond the reach of most countries, save those with direct supply lines to the two superpowers.

In the first days, Israeli Finance Minister Pinhas Sapir estimated, the war was costing Israel the equivalent of $170,000 every minute.

In global strategy, the experts believe this will force a number of important political decisions, particularly in Western Europe. There the choice between strengthened military ties with the United States or a common-European defence policy and budget have yet to be clearly defined.

The experts believe the principal revelation of the conflict is that armored forces can be slowed or even checked by infantry massively equipped with light, highly efficient anti-tank weapons if the infantry have a degree of air cover.

The Israeli jets which attempted to sweep the terrain where the Egyptians entrenched themselves after crossing the Suez canal Oct. 6 were met by a hail of SAM-6 ground-to-air missiles from the other side of the canal. These proved highly effective against low-flying aircraft on strafing missions, the experts said.

With uncertain air cover, the first Israeli tank crews to counterattack the Egyptians said they had the impression every third Egyptian soldier was equipped with an anti-tank missile.

The Egyptians made deadly use of the wire-guided Sagger missile. It has an effective range of 3,000 yards, is easily fired and guided from the ground or an armored car, with a hollow charge that can apparently pierce every known armor.

Fired in batches by infantry hidden up to 15 yards from the portable launcher, they are believed by the experts to have accounted for many Israeli tanks in the first counter-attacks.

The halting of Israeli armor and the interdiction of air space by Egyptian missile batteries forced the Israeli general staff to devise a new attack plan.

The plan was the crossing of the Suez canal to the Egyptian rear by what was initially a small task force aimed "taking out the missiles."

"This is the first time in military history that a ground force has been used to clear the terrain in order that air support might be brought in to permit that same ground force to, in turn, operate under cover of an air umbrella," a foreign military attaché said.

With the entire east canal bank occupied by the Egyptians at that stage of the war, the Israeli forces used their armor in the hope of drawing the Egyptians out while announcing to the world that one of the great tank battles in history was in progress.

The Egyptian commanders, confident in the superiority of their brand new Soviet-made T-62 tanks over the generally older Israeli armor, were drawn forward and to the flanks, out of range of the protective umbrella provided by their ground-to-air missiles on the other bank.

The Israeli response was to pull back the Israeli tanks and send in low-flying and highly manoeuvrable French-designed Fouga Magister jets equipped with "tank-busting" rockets. Western experts said. The Egyptian armor withdrew from the field leaving many of its tanks gutted and destroyed.

But the lesson of the battle would only have a short-term effect, the experts said, since it was probable that a missile of the quality of the SAM-6 but able to operate from more highly mobile platforms, would be designed in the near future.

The SAM-6 batteries themselves were not totally invulnerable and while they have a 360-degree firing radius, the Israeli planes were able to develop tactics to hit them.

One of the most interesting weapons to be used in the current conflict and which probably has a definite future — if its accuracy can be improved — is the tactical-range ground-to-ground missile.

The frog-7 missiles used by Syria in the opening days of the war against areas deep within Israel can carry a half-ton explosive warhead over 43 miles.

One timeless lesson of warfare which was underlined by the present conflict was the need for constant and wide-ranging reconnaissance, the experts said.

Reconnaissance and intelligence gathering by low-flying pilotless drones or high-altitude satellite overflights are some of the answers the world can develop to meet threats ranging from infantry lying in ambush with an anti-tank weapon to the concentration of fast-moving armor far to the rear, the experts said.

Thinking Audience Anna's Delight

By ERITH SMITH
Colonist Reporter

When Anna Wyman's dancers present one of her choreographed programs she is delighted when audience members come up afterward to ask what one (or more) numbers were all about.

"I'm even happier," she said in an interview, "when they come and tell me what they think it's all about."

"It's amazing how far their ideas may range from what I had in mind when creating the dances. What's rewarding is that the dances have made them think, have built a story in their minds."

"That's what I hope for with contemporary dancing: to please the audience with the performance, of course, but more than that to make them think for themselves. The differences don't matter. After all, no two people see exactly the same things, or think the same way."

Slim, dark, intense, Miss Wyman is obviously wholly devoted to dance as a means of expression and communication.

She began her own career in Austria, and became a guest artist with a number of ballet companies in Europe. Ballet was her basic training, but before long she branched out into contemporary dance as clearer way of reaching her audience than through strictly classical ballet.

Behind the Scenes

"For the classical I have the greatest admiration and respect, and it is an essential foundation for the work we do," she says.

Miss Wyman began doing in England what she is now doing, with growing and notable success, in and from Vancouver. She formed her own small company, choreographed her own dances, and took them to audiences wherever and whenever possible.

Her direct grounding in this field was a period of study with Rudolf Laban and his creative-movement theories. After seven years she left England and came to Vancouver.

There she set about at once to build what is now the Anna Wyman Dance Theatre and school, gathering together a new small group. She trained them for three years before she felt they had reached the necessary standards of technical precision and creative excellence that were her targets.

In 1969, Miss Wyman received a personal Canada

Council grant to enable her to return to England for further studies in creative movement. In 1972 another grant to spend the summer studying the work of a number of European choreographers.

This past summer she created a contemporary dance department at the Shawinigan Lake International Summer School of the Arts, and spent a month in residence there with her company.

Two months ago Miss Wyman was appointed to the Canada Council's national arts advisory panel for a three-year term.

Her company was launched in Vancouver in the fall of 1971 with a series of noon programs at the Vancouver Art Gallery.

This was the beginning of a gradual rise to the point where today the company members are not dependent on occasional grants and part-time jobs for a livelihood; they can make a full (if not fat) living with their dancing. More than that: the company was the first in B.C. to receive a Canada Council grant, and was sent by the Canadian external affairs department last July to Germany, to permit Anna Wyman's work to be entered in the International Young Choreographers' competition in Cologne.

Her work entitled Here at the Eye of the Hurricane was chosen from 20 entries as one of the best three.

This work, incidentally, will be part of the program offered by the Anna Wyman dancers tonight at McPherson Playhouse.

The company has toured much of B.C. in the past year, and plans to carry its work into Alberta next year. For early 1975, exciting plans call for a 40-performance tour of Eastern Canada.

"Most rewarding of all for me, I think," says Miss Wyman, "is taking our work into the schools. We have never had a problem of restlessness or disturbance with those young audiences. They watch in rapt attention, and often imitate quietly the movements of the dancers."

"Sometimes when the children laugh aloud we're sorry to hear the teachers shush them. The laughter shows the young ones are truly with us."

"Once in a senior high school the students really got the feel of the program, cheering and even whistling their approval and involvement. We were shocked afterward to hear the headmaster scold them over the loudspeaker for their "bad behavior to the artists."

"Those students knew what we were doing. The principal didn't. For Anna Wyman, those students, and people of all ages like them, are what it's all about."

Although there is no shortage in B.C. of electricity, heating oil or gasoline, and none on the horizon, a campaign to conserve energy in the provincial government buildings was launched Wednesday.

Public Works Minister William Hartley said that effective immediately the temperature in B.C. Government buildings will be lowered and stricter controls placed on lighting.

He told a news conference that working temperatures in the buildings will be cut back to 68 degrees, adding that in the past the heat had been kept at 70 and 74 degrees. He said the temperature will be allowed to fall to 60 degrees at night when the buildings are not in use.

Instructions have also been issued that lights be turned off in all offices when they are vacated at the end of each day and also during lunch hours when unoccupied. Use of exterior and grounds lighting will be reduced except where security would be jeopardized.

Hartley said the plan is to save energy and to develop in people an interest and concern in conservation.

"We are fortunate in B.C. that we apparently have no shortage at the present time of electrical energy and our supply of oil and gas seems to be adequate."

"It is my belief, however," he said, "that we should conserve our electrical energy capacity to meet future demands so that the need to construct additional energy generating facilities is minimized."

Hartley said that lighting levels in buildings will be checked to ensure against excessive illumination and a check will be made to determine whether heat loss can be cut back with better insulation and weather stripping or storm windows.

The minister said he is hopeful that the government employees will not only cooperate in their work areas, but also practice conservation measures in their homes.

He said he was confident that all building owners in B.C. would take similar steps to reduce energy consumption and to cut down on energy waste.

Bloody Greyhound Training Under Court Axe

OCALA, Fla. (UPI) — A taste for blood is the trigger that sends muzzled greyhounds hurtling after a mechanical rabbit, providing sport and big profits for thousands of Floridians.

The dog's instinct to kill is whetted behind the scenes, in enclosed "coursing fields" where live jackrabbits are turned loose to run for their lives. Most of them die.

In a Pavlovian trick, the greyhounds are taught to chase a mechanical lure with a live white rabbit dangling from it as bait. If the rabbit, hanging by its hind legs a few inches off the ground, doesn't bleat loudly enough, a built-in "wailer" simulates its cry of terror.

The dogs are allowed to chew on the rabbit at the end of its ride.

This use of sacrificial rabbits to train greyhounds has led to a courtroom confrontation between state prosecutors, spurred on by humane interest groups, and representatives of Florida's 100 million dog racing industry.

In a decision sure to be appealed, Circuit Judge E. R.

Mills of Ocala last week ordered Florida Greyhound College to quit using live rabbits for training dogs, but delayed the effect of the order until Dec. 1, 1974, to give the school time to come up with an alternate technique.

A key witness in the case was Allen Cowman, a St. Petersburg Times reporter, who described a training session at the dog college, operated by Richard Kiper.

"Coursing consists of releasing a jackrabbit, trained to find an escape, into an enclosed field moments before a pack of hungry greyhounds is set free. The unmuzzled greyhounds, who track by sight rather than scent, go after the rabbit."

"As the gap narrows and the rabbit senses the kill, it begins to bleat a terrorized wail as it zig-zags to escape. The dogs, heads to the ground, hear the cry and put on a burst of speed. The greyhounds get closer, closer, open their jaws wide. In an instant it's over, the dogs often ripping the mangled rabbit among them, snarling over the spoils."

"The greyhound owners argue that there is simply no other way to train a racing dog and that a ban on rabbits will ruin an industry that puts $34 million a year in the state treasury through the pari-mutuel windows."

"That's ridiculous," says Dr. Frederick Thomsen, president of the National Humane Information Service, headquartered in St. Petersburg.

"Anyone who knows anything about dog psychology and Pavlovian experiments knows you can train them to go after anything."

"You could use stuffed skins, anything resembling an animal, with animal fat smeared on them."

Mike Corin, an assistant state attorney general involved in the case, said the bait could be killed first, "in some humane way," then put on a rack.

In Australia, where greyhound racing is still a widely popular sport, the use of live rabbits was outlawed more than 10 years ago.

A similar law is in effect in Massachusetts, one of the few states besides Florida where dog racing is legal. One man was convicted recently for violating that law.

"Massachusetts has several tracks and they haven't gone out of business because they can't use live animals for training," said Frank McMahon, chief investigator for the Humane Society of the United States. "There are other ways."

While 17 of the nation's 34 betting tracks are located in Florida, Thomsen said many of the dogs are trained in Kansas, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Texas.

"These dogs go from track to track," he said. "Out West they have coursing meets, where the public is invited. We don't do that in Florida."

"They let a live rabbit loose, then open the gates in a simulated starting box and the dogs chase the rabbit. At the other end is a place where the rabbit can get under the fence, but the dogs usually get him first."

Ocala attorney John Wal-kup, who helped defend Kiper, said, "We definitely plan to appeal."

Race Car Drivers Accident Prone

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Racing car drivers have more accidents and get more speeding tickets than ordinary motorists, the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety reports.

The non-profit research group said it compared the driving records of 447 race drivers in Florida, New York and Texas with 1,053 motorists in the same states.

The average number of speeding violations per race car driver in Florida was 1.28 compared with 0.44 for average motorists. In New York the ratio was 1.06 for race car drivers compared with 0.35 for the average motorist. In Texas the ratio was 1.63 to 0.88.

The accident statistics showed much the same thing. In Florida, race car drivers were involved in 0.28 accidents per driver compared with 0.14 for average motorists. In Texas the ratios were 0.58 compared with 0.49 in New York, 0.64 compared with 0.49.

The results "suggest a need for caution regarding the assumption that advanced driver education and related techniques can be translated into reduced crash experience," the report said.

Girl, 12, Dies In Car Pileup

STRATHMORE, Alta. (CP) — A 12-year-old Calgary girl was killed in an accident that involved a semi-trailer tanker truck and seven cars 12 miles east of Strathmore on the TransCanada highway. The girl, whose name was not released, was in the fifth vehicle of the string.

But it said its statistics did not take into account the claim that race drivers drive more miles than the average motorist.

The report noted that racing drivers hold "national competition" licenses, which they earn partly on the basis of advanced training in driving technique and crash avoidance.

Looking at all kinds of traffic violations, the report said racing car drivers in New York were involved in 0.49 violations per driver, compared with 0.38 per driver for average motorists. This ratio in Texas was 0.46 to 0.43 in Florida, 0.65 to 0.50.

Dad Pays $1.2 Million

MUNICH, Germany (UPI) — The pretty, 22-year-old daughter of the owner of the worldwide chain of Wienerwald restaurants was kidnapped from one of her father's establishments Wednesday and he paid $1.2 million ransom, two Munich newspapers said. The reports did not say whether the young woman had been freed. Complete secrecy surrounded the mysterious disappearance early Wednesday morning from a Munich discotheque of Evelyn Jahn, daughter of Friedrich Jahn, the 49-year-old head of the vast Wienerwald chain of food shops and restaurants. He answered all questions with "no comments". But the newspapers T.Z. and Munchener Merkur said in their Wednesday night editions Jahn paid the ransom on an East German highway, not far from the border town of Hof.

The newspapers said Jahn got a telephone call at 3 a.m. from a man who spoke calmly with a Munich accent. Jahn was told his daughter had been kidnapped after leaving the Old Style discotheque — part of the Wienerwald empire — and she would be set free 12 hours after the ransom had been paid.

The caller also played back a tape with what appeared to be Evelyn's voice pleading her father to obey the kidnapper's orders.

"Don't call the police or I'll die," T.Z. quoted part of the conversation. A couple of hours later Jahn left with the ransom, but neither paper disclosed how he managed to get that amount of money that early in the morning while banks were closed.

Jahn started as waiter in a Munich suburb and in 1955 he bought his own cafe and his wife, Hwrmine, was the cook. Three years later he owned about 20 restaurants. The Jahn empire now includes more than 400 restaurants in West Germany, New York, Tokyo, Paris and Milan.

Bork Proposed To Back Away

CHICAGO (UPI) — U.S. Attorney James Thompson said Wednesday Acting U.S. Attorney-General Robert Bork suggested dropping contempt charges against the so-called Chicago Seven to avoid reopening old wounds and to give the justice department a "liberal image."

Thompson said Bork told him there had been "many suggestions" to drop the contempt charges and that both former attorney-general Elliot Richardson and Richardson's deputy William French Smith had thought the case should not be taken to trial.

Thompson said he convinced Bork to press the contempt charges because "it came at a time when everybody from the president on down was being pressed to observe the laws of the land."

Thompson testified under a defence subpoena at the contempt trial of five members of the Chicago Seven and two attorneys who represented them in their 1969-70 trial on charges of conspiring to incite riots during the 1968 Democratic national convention.

Defence attorney William Kunstler testified Wednesday that government authorities had searched waste baskets, read mail and placed electronic bugs in the offices of the Seven and their lawyers during the riot conspiracy trial.

Kunstler said he complained "many times" to Judge Julius Hoffman about the government surveillance but without success.

"We tried to subpoena (then FBI director) J. Edgar Hoover so we could prove to the judge that this surveillance was going on, but the judge quashed the subpoena. We were unable to get before the court what was happening," Kunstler said.

Kunstler, fellow attorney Leonard Weinglass and five of the Chicago Seven are facing contempt charges stemming from the original trial of the Seven on charges stemming from riots during the 1968 Democratic national convention.

On Tuesday, Weinglass said he had learned the Pentagon had acknowledged a military intelligence unit kept the defendants at the first trial under surveillance.

Kunstler said that during the original trial two defence lawyers caught an FBI agent "names Hill" with a listening device outside their assigned federal building office. They chased him down the hall and caught him "loaded with electronic gear," he said.

He said he complained to Hoffman, but to no avail.

Kunstler said when he complained to Hoffman, the judge said, "The marshals know what they are doing and they will keep order in the courtroom."

Thought His Gun Was Empty

AUSTIN, Tex., (UPI) — Former Dallas policeman Darrell Cain tearfully testified Wednesday how he placed his chrome-plated revolver at the head of 12-year-old Santos Rodriguez and pulled the trigger because the youth refused to confess to a burglary.

But Cain, sitting rigidly in the witness chair and taking occasional quick glances at the seven men, five women jury, said he didn't mean to kill the young burglary suspect as he sat handcuffed in a police car.

"I didn't know there was a bullet in the gun," Cain said.

The former policeman is charged with murder in the case. The defence has contended the shooting was accidental.

Marines in Peking Win the Action

Colonist-Los Angeles Times Service
PEKING — American marines have a long and colorful history in China, from the Boxer rebellion through the decades between world wars, and now they are back again in the U.S. liaison office set up this year.
They are kept about as low profile as possible — in civilian clothes, inside the office without side arms. Even at that, American diplomats wish they were not around at all. For the marines already have developed a reputation.

"Those marines have done more to set back Sino-American relations than anything I know," complained one U.S. official based in Washington.
American officials stationed here are puzzled by the remark, for they claim no scandalous behavior has occurred. But they admit that the Chinese are sensitive about the marine presence guarding the liaison office — the only foreign military men in China — and U.S. diplomats frankly try to discourage stories about the marines.

Requests by a correspondent to interview a marine — all of whom are enlisted and single — were refused. Similarly, requests to visit the marine quarters — a saloon — were turned aside.

Stories about the saloon, as most stories about marine heroics, are probably gilded but there is no doubt that it is reputedly the best action — and only action — in town.

Peking has no bars, no movies, no dancing places. The closest thing to entertainment are the revolutionary ballets like the White-Haired Girl performed Sunday night, in which the "lovers" move toward a clinch only to sing instead that The Sun Is Rising. The Sun Is Mao Tse Tung.
The saloon is only a bar with a small dance area built by the marines in the living and dining rooms of a three-bedroom apartment which six of them share in a diplomatic residence.

Chinese girls are strictly forbidden from consorting with foreigners, so girls from the secretarial staff of western embassies are usually the marines' dates.

You also get better-focused, truer colour. Because Sony's single gun system needs just one lens—and it's more than twice the size of everyone else's. ## Still Accountant at Heart

Second Year Trappings Surround Comic

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — "You can tell we're in our second year," Bob Newhart said, waving his hand around his dressing room.

It was a beautifully decorated room recently built alongside stage 5 at CBS studio centre. Previously the comedian was housed in a cramped trailer on the same site.

His new quarters are made up to look like a fancy bachelor pad with a bar, antiques and fancy doodads on the wall.

But, alas, it is a facade. There is also a profusion of photographs of his wife, Virginia, and their three children. Actually, Newhart seems out of place in the surroundings himself.

He is a self-effacing guy with a deprecatory fanner. If there was ever a Midwest boy who became an accountant and then an entertainment star without letting it go to his head, Newhart is the man.

Among the flashy, colorful kooks who inhabit Hollywood, Newhart is unmistakably a Chicago accountant at heart.

But he is the first to admit he could not return to accounting or his life in Chicago. Not that he puts the work or the city down. He has become accustomed to great wealth, famous friends, a membership at the Bel Air Country Club and, to a degree, his own celebrity.

"I've been told to speed up my delivery when I perform," Bob noted quietly. "But if I lose the stammer I'm just another slightly amusing accountant."

That is precisely what he was 15 years ago.

"When I began in show business I wanted to own a small radio station," he said. "And be a part owner of a golf course. Well, I bought and sold a radio station and I'm still working on the golf course."

How has he changed after 15 years in the limelight?

"It's a matter of being conditioned to the pressures," he said. "I'm like the people who emigrated to Australia from this country a few years back. They couldn't get used to the lack of pace. They missed the struggle and the tensions, the very thing they most wanted to get away from."

"That's why I couldn't go back to being an accountant in Chicago. I'm not the same man I was in those days. I was lucky in the beginning with instant acceptance of my records and an Emmy for my first television show."

"I was a big success in a short space of time. And I know how unimportant instant fame can be."

After his initial success Newhart experienced something of a professional drought for several years, playing clubs and making guest appearances.

Now "the Bob Newhart Show" is high in the ratings and he is more in demand than ever.

Lining Up For Change

Yellow lines painted across roadway on approach to interchange near London have helped British drivers to judge speed more accurately—and significantly reduced number of accidents in area. Lines, at reducing intervals from 20 feet down to about 10 feet over distance of 1,300 feet, create illusion of speed that causes driver to slow progressively as he approaches exit or interchange.

Call KL00

If You See UFO

CORVALLIS, Ore. (UPI) — A radio station that offered a $10,000 reward for any living space creature brought to its studio, has had to put in a special UFO telephone to handle the surge of calls.

Bob Houghum, owner and general manager of KL00, says that apparently people all over North America are interested in two things — space people and money.

One caller from Pennsylvania played a recording of a strange screeching moan that he said was emitted by a 9-foot hairy thing with red eyes that was seen running through the woods near Sharon, Pa.

Houghum said numerous people have called KL00 to see if they can claim the reward for moon rocks or moon dust, but he said the offer is good only for a living creature from outer space that has never been on Earth before. He said listeners with information leading to the possible $10,000 reward are asked to phone (503)-753-5566 — but not collect.

Jerry's Busy Sweeping Up Cash

Colonist—Los Angeles Times Service

LOS ANGELES — "Chim chimney, chim chimney, chim chim cher-ee. A sweep is as lucky as lucky can be..."

He was singing that song on the rooftop—the one Dick van Dyke sang in Mary Poppins.

He looked a bit like van Dyke. Only he wasn't.

Jerry Marx is for real — an honest-to-goodness chimney sweep. He thinks he's the only sweep in all of Los Angeles.

Marx, 34, was looking for something different to do a year ago.

"I had been in the beauty supply business 10 years," he said, "working with women. I had had it."

Marx, his wife, Barbara, and their three children had just moved to a new home at the time "we had chimney problems in our new home. The walls and ceilings were sooty. I tried to find a chimney sweep. There just was no one available who did that kind of work."

"I thought of Harry Greisheimer."

Marx explained why.

"When I was in the army at Kaiserslautern, Germany, 15 years ago, my best friend was a sweep named Harry Greisheimer. He came from a long line of sweeps."

"Harry took me along on the job. He made a good living. Chimney sweeps are respected professionals in Europe. They have their own uniform — black funeral suits, top hats.

"I decided — what the hell — this might be it."

Marx, who has the lanky build necessary for a chimney sweep, has been running his business out of his home ever since.

He reports to a job in tails, top hat and rakish red scarf.

"Image is a big thing in any business," he said.

Before he begins, the tails are laid aside for green coveralls.

It's dirty work, of course, sweeping down a chimney from rooftop to fireplace.

"You should see what I sweep out," he said. "Balls, dead birds, leaves, twigs, whiskey and beer bottles and all kinds of junk."

Whooping Crane Count Short

AUSTWELL, Tex. (UPI) —

Wildlife experts at the Aransas National Wildlife Refuge said a second count of the world's only wild flock of whooping cranes turned up one short but they were not worried. "We probably missed one. It's easy to do," said assistant refuge manager Lee Marlatt who earlier aided in a survey that recorded 41 adults and two youngsters.

ing a sweep. I'm sure I am." His average charge for cleaning a chimney is $25.

He dreams about the day when he has chimney sweeps all over town working for him.

"Why not? Chimneys in Southern California are terribly neglected, plugged and filled with ashes and debris. There just are no sweeps around to clean them."

Land use must be carefully planned. Only the voters should have the right to change the plan.

Lancaster Returns To Israel

TEL AVIV (AP) — Actor Burt Lancaster, whose television serial was interrupted by the Mideast war, has returned to Israel to resume his role as Moses in a six-part special.

Lancaster left the country because his prime shooting location in Sinai was near the Suez front and the Israeli extras in the cast went off to fight.

The actor said Monday he had gone to Rome to shoot some interior scenes and had considered going to Spain or Spanish Morocco "or any place where we would continue to shoot desert scenes."

Noting that the best place to shoot the story of Moses was, of course, in Israel, Lancaster added, "When it began to look like there was a possibility the ceasefire would hold, we decided to come back."

Not like a good western on late-late show, not Canadian, so "why should we care?"

Princess "would rather have gone off to the registry office for a civil wedding."

Ceremony Was 'Just Lovely,' Most Agree

By CLAUDE ADAMS
Colonist Reporter

Greater Victoria monarchy-watchers both young and old, cynical and romantic, single and married, had something to say Wednesday about the wedding of the decade.

Some, like travelling cowboy Brian Roy, couldn't be bothered staying up all night to watch the pageantry of the Princess Anne-Mark Phillips marriage. Nothing but a good western would keep him up past midnight.

"It's their affair; it's not a Canadian affair. Why should we care?" he asked, represented the minority view that the whole gala event was just a big yawn.

Most of the people questioned in an informal poll, however, agreed with homemaker Nancy Craig that the wedding was "just lovely."

"Five hundred million people watched it on TV, so you know the monarchy is not dead."

Mrs. Craig and her children lit a fire in the fireplace, brought out the tea and biscuits, sat around their remote-controlled color TV and dutifully followed the ceremonies through the wee hours.

"We all stood up when they played God Save the Queen," she said.

Others, like pretty clerk-typist Jeannette Leno, didn't catch the wedding live but were waiting for the reruns.

"I've heard that Princess Anne was beautiful and gorgeous, and Mark Phillips was very calm and smiling."

"She's royalty and he's sort of a commoner, and I think that's good."

Retired RCMP officer Dennis Williams, who remembers the abdication of the Duke of Windsor to marry a commoner, agreed the wedding fits the times.

"You don't have to go far back into history, just 30 years, to see that they had to marry people chosen for them. It's a great thing to see for the younger generation."

One disgruntled old gentleman with a strong East European accent huffed about the left-leaning news media, and said the wedding telecast was an exaltation of "the good old days."

"It's much better than those communist shows you see on television. The news media brings us too many left things, but this was good. A good show."

Bernie Matwick, feeding the pigeons on the Yates Street mall, regretted that he couldn't watch the wedding because he works all night and sleeps most of the day.

"I'm an old bachelor myself, and I think it's all right."

And gardener Heinz Eisserer remarked that millions of people get married every year, so what was all the fuss about. Furthermore, the couple was raking in a lot of money as a result of the lavish wedding, he said.

For many Victorians, the happy event was well worth the small sacrifice of forsaking a few hours sleep, especially at a time when the world is convulsed by war and Watergate.

Home economics teacher Barbara Ashmore, for example, invited three friends to her home at 6 a.m. for a "royal breakfast" of sweet wine, fresh fruit salad and omelets au gratin, and together they oohed and aahed as the ceremonies unfolded.

All in their mid-20s, they revelled in the "tradition."

Princess Anne, of course, was the centre of attraction and she received almost all the comment.

Mrs. Val Bennett, an old-age pensioner born in London, said the down-to-earth princess "would rather have gone off to the registry office for a civil wedding," but she did what she had to do with the minimum of fuss.

"The monarchy gives the people a sense of stability," she said.

Sara Blenkinsop concurred, although noting that Anne wasn't as popular as her brother Prince Charles. She watched all the celebrations leading up to the wedding, but didn't have the stamina to sit through the wedding itself.

It was a red-letter day for the Monarchist League of Vancouver Island, which dispatched a telegram of congratulations to Buckingham Palace.

Most of the 200 members, including chairman Mary Ingram ("I would be ready to give my life for the queen."), sat glued to their TV sets throughout the night, overjoyed that the royal family was at the centre of world-wide attention.

All this stood in sharp contrast to the attitude of 83-year-old Barney Whiple, who waved away a reporter and photographer with the words: "Leave me alone, dammit. I'm not patriotic."

B.C. Hydro Explains 400-Foot-Wide Gash

Greater Victoria residents who know little about voltages, induced currents or transmission lines got their first chance Wednesday night to test B.C. Hydro's promise to give the phrase "power to the people" new meaning.

The scene was a meeting in a Colwood motel, called by B.C. Hydro to elicit public opinion on the proposed route for new power lines between Victoria and the Qualicum area.

The proposal amounts to cutting a 400-foot-wide gash for a distance of 90 miles along the eastern foothills of the Vancouver Island mountain range, and installing power lines that will meet the Island's needs until the year 2,000.

Eighty people attended the meeting, part of a new approach by the utility and they were for the most part baffled by the technical ins and outs of providing electrical power.

B.C. Hydro's engineers, economists and consulting ecologists know roughly where the steel towers should go but the Crown corporation is seeking public feedback, especially in the area of land use. The proposed route, they say, is very flexible.

The people wanted to know why the cables can't be laid underground; why a submarine cable along the east coast of the island couldn't do the job; why the new towers couldn't be built parallel to existing lines, instead of cutting a new swath.

They asked about other sources of power (thermal, nuclear) and precise information on whose personal property the towers would cut through.

One young man wondered if the Island really needed new power lines, prompting Hydro executive Charles Nash to comment a bit testily: "If we still lived in log cabins, we wouldn't need transmission lines at all."

The meeting started out on a slightly hostile note as two members of the public quizzed Hydro officials on a 40-acre block of farmland in Colwood that had been covered with wood chips during the building of power towers.

"Where were the ecologists then?" one man asked. "Surely they were not so bound up in red tape that they couldn't make an adjustment, and move the steel towers 300 or 400 feet away."

The Hydro officials patiently fielded all complaints, and all suggestions, however off-beat, were noted "for future study."

But they did explain that underground cables through agricultural land were an engineering difficulty and repairs costly. And a submarine cable along 90 miles of coastline was impossible, they said.

Furthermore, it was impractical to build the new lines along the existing lines to the east because the added land would be difficult to obtain.

"The old line was built in 1946," Nash said, "and a lot of it was on wild land. Now the area is all built up and it's rough to get a right of way."

He added that more than 90 per cent of the land through which the new line would pass will be Crown-owned, diminishing the effect on private property.

The 400-foot gash through the island will eventually form the route for two 500,000-volt transmission lines. The old line to the east now carries 138,000 volts, not enough for the Island's projected needs in the next decade.

What purpose does this kind of meeting serve?

Hydro spokesman John Dawson told the Colonist that one main aim is to make senior executives of the utility more responsive to the public.

"We've learned a whole lot and I don't want to use the words ivory tower, but we've got our senior people out of the head office environment."

Dawson said that the utility, which he likened to a huge supertanker that requires miles to turn around, is learning to base its policies not solely on engineering and technical considerations.

"We are making value judgments for the first time, he added.

A follow-up meeting is planned for early next year, when a special report on the environmental impact of the new power lines will be ready for discussion.

School Curbs Studied

A study to curb consumption of natural resources will be recommended to the Greater Victoria school board by the facilities and school support committee.

Already steps have been taken to check all school thermostats and control devices and discussions have been held with custodians and principals.

The motion on the subject to be made by Trustee Walter Donald, chairman of the committee, will recommend that the school board study all practical means that the district, as a responsible corporate citizen might curb the consumption of natural resources such as electricity, fuel oil, gas, paper and water.

Cycling Trail's Bill Could Hit $2 Million

By BARBARA MCINTOCK
Colonist Legislature Staff

Development of a proposed cycling trail from Victoria to Lake Cowichan could cost as much as $2 million, a parks branch study into the proposal has found.

And the development could bring the parks branch into conflict with the Victoria Pacific Railway Company, the highways department, the provincial transit bureau, the Greater Victoria Water Board and the B.C. Forest Service.

Moreover, it is based upon use of the old CNR railway track — a line the railway has not yet officially abandoned.

But despite these disadvantages, "the adoption in principle of this proposed parkway is highly desirable and therefore firmly recommended," the study concludes.

Recreation Minister Jack Radford, making the study public, said he would set up an inter-agency task force "to try to eliminate any conflicts there might be if the parkway is established."

If the government favors early establishment of the trail, Radford should urge the CNR and the transport commissioners to hurry the abandonment process, the study suggests.

Cost of the land for the entire 82-mile strip might be between $500,000 and $1 million, the study estimates, between $360,000 and $720,000 for the right-of-way from Victoria to Deerholm.

Cost of an eight-foot cycling path would be about $10,000 a mile, while the campsites and picnic site developments would cost about $135,000.

Landscaping for the first 59 miles would cost about $265,000. This would include engineering details and costs for safe road crossings.

Conflict with the Victoria Pacific Railway Company would come because the company leases from the railway a small section of line in Colwood to operate a recreational tourist steam train during the summer. The company plans to expand this operation.

The study recommends that to overcome this conflict, the B.C. government should encourage the CPR to accommodate the Victoria Pacific train on its E and N tracks "as token consideration of this aspect of our national heritage."

Conflict with the highways department might come because some of the corridor would be useful for widening highways, and the transit bureau is looking at the right-of-way as a line for future rapid transit.

However, alternatives could be found for these groups, the study says, and encouragement of cycling might "offset" some of the apparent need for wider and faster roads.

Radford

UVic Senate Approves Postgraduate Programs

A basic two-year postgraduate degree program will be the first project of the University of Victoria's new school of public administration.

The UVic senate Wednesday night approved in principle an outline of the program put forward by the school's head, Neil Perry. First students are due to enter the school next September.

Perry said that emphasis in the program would be on the practical needs of the practising public administrator, rather than on those of the researcher, but it will be a sophisticated and rigorous course, leading to the degree of master of public administration.

It will be well beyond the motivation and capability of many persons interested in the subject, said Perry, and later other programs will have to be set up to meet those persons' needs.

Such programs might include a diploma course or some undergraduate courses, he suggested.

The masters' program will be designed for those involved in all levels of senior public administration—municipal, regional, provincial and federal—and involved with quasi-governmental bodies.

Students entering the program with no previous work experience in the field would have to fulfill an internship requirement, possibly between the first and second years of the program.

All students in the course would take five core classes in the first year, then be allowed to specialize in the second year.

However, some students entering with exceptional qualifications would be allowed to complete the course in one year.

Perry said he thought the school would employ only three faculty members. These would be augmented by faculty from related departments such as political science and economics and by special sessional lectures where necessary.

Academic Costs: $18.5 Million

University of Victoria spent just over $18.5 million on operating expenses in the last fiscal year, with more than 80 per cent of the money coming from provincial grants.

Audited financial statements given to a senate meeting Wednesday night showed that provincial operating grants in the 1972-73 fiscal year amounted to $15.1 million, with students' tuition fees amounting to just $2.3 million, one-eighth of the total.

Major expenditure was for academic costs, amounting to $11.4 million. More than $7.6 million of that went for faculty salaries.

The library cost the university $2.2 million, about half of it for salaries. A total of $750,000 was spent on books and periodicals.

Administration costs were $1.1 million, and maintenance of the campus cost $1.8 million. More than $265,000 went on scholarships and bursaries.

The university ended the year with an operating surplus of $387,630.

Errors Costly to Canadiens As Bruins Pad Division Lead

Only nine members remain from the team which won the Stanley Cup in 1972 but Boston Bruins have established themselves as the team to catch in the National Hockey League.

They moved five points ahead of the closest East Division pursuit on Wednesday night, edging the defending-champion Montreal Canadiens for the second time in less than a week, this time by 4-3.

Good goalkeeping from Gilles Gilbert, persistent checking and two glaring defensive errors by Canadiens combined to give Bruins the victory although they didn't get a point from Phil Esposito and Bobby Orr.

Canadiens, who had Frank Mahovlich marking his return to the lineup with his finest performance of the season, held their own in the first two periods and then lost it while managing a third-period edge in play.

Going into the final 20 minutes at 2-2, Canadiens couldn't make it back after mistakes by defencemen Serge Savard and Pierre Bouchard were turned into a 4-2 Boston lead.

Rookie Andre Savard broke the tie when namesake Serge Savard ventured too far into the Boston zone in pursuit of the puck and the Bruins got a three-on-one break. Then, at 10:10, Bouchard made one of those careless passes Canadiens so often come up with in their own zone, and Ken Hodge calmly accepted the unexpected and beat Wayne Thomas on the short side with a quick shot.

Additional Sport P. 19, 20, 22, 23, 24

Jacques Lemaire near centre ice and putting Don Marotte in with a quick pass.

Canadiens, who pulled even on power-play goals by Cournoyer in the first period, and Mahovlich, in the second period, were outlucked twice and out-ruled once in the comeback try that failed.

Steve Shutt and Jacques Lapierre both hit a post with Gilbert beaten, and referee Ron Wicks ruled he had blown his whistle before Cournoyer dug the puck from under Gilbert and pushed it over the line just after Hodge scored.

It was the third straight defeat for the Stanley Cup champions, and it dropped them into third place.

Moving ahead were the Buffalo Sabres, who so far have refused to buckle from the injuries which removed Gil Perreault and Jim Schoenfeld from their lineup.

Now 3-1 since the loss of their two young stars, the Sabres moved into Atlanta and ended the Flames' unbeaten run at seven games by scoring a 3-1 decision.

Also on the move are the Detroit Red Wings, who kept Alex Delvecchio the only unbeaten coach in the NHL by coming from behind to edge New York Islanders, 4-3, in a Detroit game which produced 122 minutes in penalties, 84 of them in the first period.

It followed, of course, that power-play goals counted heavily, Mickey Redmond providing the difference by scoring twice with Islanders shorthanded.

Redmond's second goal, and 10th of the season, came at 11:29 of the third period and pulled his club even. Henry Bouchard provided the winning goal, and Delvecchio with his third straight victory four minutes later.

New York Rangers and Chicago Black Hawks, both struggling for expected respectability, fought to a 4-4 tie in New York. And in the other game not played on the West Coast, Vancouver Canucks continued to have road troubles, taking a 6-3 beating from Minnesota North Stars.

Goals by Bruce MacGregor and Sheldon Kannegieser brought Rangers from 2-4 in the third period.

In Bloomington, Bill Goldsborough and Danny Grant both scored their ninth and 10th goals of the season to keep Canucks down. North Stars, scoring twice on power plays, were 4-0 by the seventh minute of the second period.

Shorthanded Goals Help Flyers Triumph

It isn't always true that those that live by the sword die by the sword.

Philadelphia Flyers, on the way to breaking the National Hockey League penalty record they set last season, scored twice while playing shorthanded Wednesday night to slip past Los Angeles Kings, 5-4, in Los Angeles.

Victory, which finally came on a third-period scoring shot by Tom Bladen, was the first for the Flyers in seven games in Los Angeles. It boosted their West Division lead to four points.

Bobby Clarke, fast making up for a poor start this season, scored the first two goals on power plays. The first came in the first period with the Kings on a power play, and the second early in the second period with the Kings playing shorthanded.

Kings came back to pull even, but then penalty-killer Terry Crisp put Flyers ahead again when they had two men in the penalty box to one for the Kings.

It fluctuated from there, the Kings trying it twice more. The 4-4 goal came on a power play, but the Flyers were back quickly with the play that set up Bladen.

In Wednesday's other game, Toronto Maple Leafs pulled into a third-place tie in the East Division by knocking off California Golden Seals, 4-1, in Oakland.

Well-Known Golf Veteran Harold Brynjolfson Dead

HALIFAX (CP) — Harold Brynjolfson of Halifax, 64, a retired business executive, died in hospital here Tuesday.

Brynjolfson, born in Victoria, was associated with Sun Life Assurance Co. for 30 years and served as company manager in Halifax and Saint John, N.B.

He served in the Royal Canadian Navy during the second world war, including 30 months at sea, as captain of three frigates. He retired from the forces at the end of the war with the rank of lieutenant-commander.

Brynjolfson was an avid golfer and in 1929 was amateur champion of British Columbia and a member of the province's Willingdon Cup team. While in Victoria, Brynjolfson was a member of the Uplands and Gorge Vale golf clubs. Two of his brothers, Wally and Clarence, are still resident there.

WHA Referees In Bad Shape

VANCOUVER (CP) — All 12 referees under contract to the World Hockey Association are working, but some were laboring under physical handicaps, Vern Buffey, WHA referee in chief said Wednesday.

He listed seven who are recovering from injuries and said that, although they are working, "they are not necessarily healthy."

Bill Friday, who injured his back last year, is still bothered by that injury.

Bob Sloan, who has recovered from a serious eye injury last year, now is skating with a double hernia.

Buffey said surgeons will large silver cut from his leg week to determine whether an operation is necessary.

Paul Corcoran, who had a large blister out from his leg after Tuesday night's Vancouver Blazers-Winnipeg Jets game, is in "OK shape," Buffey said.

Ron Asselstine, who was carried off the ice in a stretcher from the Houston Aeros-Minnesota Saints game Tuesday suffered a bruised hip.

Eric Manship recently had 20 stitches removed from his right hand, mementos of a game earlier this year in Toronto. Buffey said the hand is still sore but Manship is "carrying on as normal."

Mike Entwistle, who injured his leg earlier this year, is reported in good condition.

Dennis Dahlmann, who injured his knee Tuesday in Edmonton, will hopefully work tonight at the Minnesota-Vancouver game in Vancouver.

Non-Winner Captures Lead In World Open Tournament

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — Red-haired Tom Watson came from five strokes off the pace with a nine-under-par 62 and swept into the fifth-round lead in the $500,000 World Open golf tournament Wednesday.

The 24-year-old Watson, who has just completed his second full year on the pro tour, charged into command with a 347 total, eight under par on the 7007-yard No. 2 course at the Pinehurst Country Club.

Watson put on an eagle-birdie-birdie-birdie finish and established a six-stroke lead in the two-week, 144-hole event that offers a record $100,000 to the winner. The tournament has three rounds to go and ends Saturday.

His round equalled the course record set by Gibby Gilbert last Thursday in taking the first-round lead, in this, the richest-ever tournament. The round also matched the best by any player on the pro tour this year.

Gilbert had led or shared the lead all the way but slipped Wednesday to a two-over-par 73.

Still, Gilbert was the only other man under par for five rounds. He had a 353 total, two under.

"It just got away from me," said Gilbert, who had a five-stroke advantage when the day's play started.

Bobby Mitchell and Miller Barber followed at 256. Mitchell had a 69 and Barber a 67 in near-perfect playing conditions.

Jerry Heard, 70, was at 257 and the rest of the field was strung out well behind. None of the first five players have won this year and Watson has never won.

Bradshaw Set For U.S. Move

Victoria may be losing one of Canada's top young tennis players at the end of the year.

Glen Bradshaw, the Canadian under-16 champion in the open division, is tentatively scheduled to move to Palo Alto, Calif., and attend one of the top tennis-oriented high schools in California. The 16-year-old is in Grade 10 at Mt. Douglas High School but plans to leave after Christmas to attend Gunn High School in Palo Alto.

Bradshaw, who also competes in badminton, volleyball and track, said competition in Canada wasn't as great.

"Glen would like to see how far he could go in tennis," said Dick Bradshaw, Glen's father. "In no way could he participate at a high level in Canada."

Born in Taber, Alta., Bradshaw has been a resident in Victoria for the past seven years.

Hiller Honored With Hutch Award

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — John Hiller, Detroit Tiger pitcher who overcame a coronary to break the major league baseball record for saves, was a landslide winner of the 1973 Hutch Award, announced Wednesday.

Ritter Collett of the sponsoring organization, the Fred Hutchinson Cancer Scholarship Fund Inc., said the 30-year-old southpaw from Toronto easily won over Danny Thompson of Minnesota and John Bench of Cincinnati Reds.

Thompson, the runner-up in the balloting by major league writers and broadcasters, has leukemia. Bench underwent surgery to remove a benign lung tumor after last season.

The voting is for a player who best exemplifies the competitiveness of Hutchinson, a former major league pitcher who was Cincinnati Reds manager when he died of cancer in 1964.

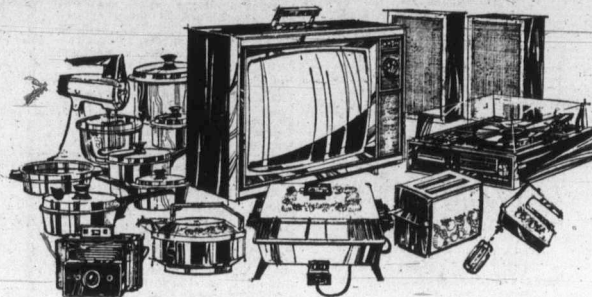

"Considering the elements of overcoming adversity that is involved, the 1973 candidates provided an exceptional field," said Collett, Dayton Ohio Journal Herald sports editor.

Hiller came back from a January, 1971, heart attack to record 38 saves this season, breaking the mark previously held by Cincinnati's Clay Carroll. Hiller had a 10-5 record, with a 1.94 earned-run average.

Harvey Heads EFC All-Stars

TORONTO (CP) — John Harvey, a cast-off from the West, is the only unanimous choice on the Eastern Football Conference all-star team.

The exciting Montreal Alouettes running back, the EFC nominee for the outstanding place award in the Canadian Football League, was one of eight Alouettes named to the team Wednesday by the Football Reporters of Canada.

Toronto Argonauts placed six players on the team while Ottawa Rough Riders, who finished first in the EFC, and last-place Hamilton Tiger-Cats had five players each selected.

Notable absentees from last year's all-star squad included Garney Henley, the outstanding player in Canada in 1972, Chuck Ealey, rookie of the year in 1972, and Jim Stillwagon, runner-up as the 1972 lineman of the year.

Voting figures were not released. The EFC said only that Harvey was the sole unanimous pick.

Alouettes joining Harvey on the offensive team were wide receiver Johnny Rodgers, EFC nominee for rookie of the year, tackle Dan Yochum and guard Ed George.

Tackle Gord Judges, end Carl Crennel, linebacker Mike Widger and halfback Dickie Harris were the Alouettes selected to the defensive squad.

Others named to the offensive backfield were Toronto quarterback Joe Theismann, running backs Andy Hopkins of Hamilton and Jim Evenson of the Riders and wide receiver Eric Allen of the Argos.

The offensive line included Hamilton's Tony Gabriel at tight end; Bill Danychuk, Hamilton, and Yochum at tackles; George and Tcats' Ed Chalupka at guard and Paul Desjardins of Toronto, centre.

Ottawa's Rudy Sims joined Judges at tackle on the defensive alignment with Crennel and Jim Corrigan of Toronto at ends.

Jerry Campbell, a near-unanimous selection at middle linebacker, was flanked by Widger and Gene Mack of Toronto. Rounding out the defensive backfield were Ottawa's Dick Adams and Al Mar-celin, Tim Anderson of Toronto and Lewis Porter of Hamilton.

Kicking specialists were not chosen. Harvey, playing his first season in the CFL, gained 1,024 yards along the ground, second in the EFC to Hopkins's 1,223.

The Montreal back, however, gained his yardage on 137 carries compared with 223 by the Hamilton workhorse.

Theismann won a close vote, with quarterbacks from all four Eastern Conference teams being named on ballots.

Mount Douglas Defends Crown

Mt. Douglas begins defence of its B.C. high school girls field hockey title Friday in Burnaby against Rutland.

11:15 and finishes against Sir Winston Churchill at 1:30 p.m.

Oak Bay, which finished second in the provincial event last year, meets Centennial of Coquitlam, Burnaby North and Kelowna at the same times as Mt. Douglas plays.

Cowichan starts out against Stanley J. Humphries of Castlegar at 10:15 a.m., meets West Vancouver at 12:30 p.m. and finishes against Windermere of Vancouver at 2:30.

The teams are divided into four sections of four teams each in the preliminary round. The top two teams in each section advance to the championship round Saturday.

Aussie Blasts Billie Jean

MELBOURNE (AP) — Australian tennis star Margaret Court blasted volleys Wednesday at her rival Billie Jean King.

"I believe Billie Jean is dodging me—and I'm trying to escape Bobby (Riggs)," said Mrs. Court from her home in Perth.

"Billie Jean is frightened to lose since she won that Billy-hoo match against Bobby Riggs. And I'm not interested in taking on Riggs again—the tax man would be the only winner."

Mrs. Court claimed that Mrs. King had made unacceptable demands to appear in the team to represent the United States in the Bonne Bell Cup against Australia.

The cup, scheduled to be played in Sydney Dec. 21-23, was won by Australia in the inaugural clash last year.

"Billie Jean asked for $30,000 for the Bonne Bell Cup matches this year, and got it," said Mrs. Court. "Even with this, she would not agree to play."

"She made demands and every time they were met, she made other demands. She finally asked for 10 per cent of the gate which is outrageous."

Mrs. Court has met Mrs. King four times in recent months. "I won three of them and in the other I had three match points," said Mrs. Court, who has won $205,000 this year.

Olympic Coins On Sale Soon

HULL, Que. (CP) — Postmaster-General Andre Ouellet minted the first of an estimated 60 million sterling-silver coins Wednesday that will be used to help finance the 1976 Olympics in Montreal.

In a brief ceremony at the Royal Canadian Mint, Mr. Ouellet expressed confidence the coin sales will be a "very successful" program.

The sales are expected to raise about $250 million for the Games.

The first four-coin commemorative set will go on sale early in December and the subsequent six series will be issued through spring and fall next year, continuing on until the close of the Games.

The coins will be issued in $10 and $5 denominations and be issued through chartered banks, post offices and other financial institutions.

The coinage will be legal tender, but officials expect little if any coins to be circulated.

The first four-coin set depicts a map of the world; a map of North America; the Montreal skyline and sailboats and landmarks of Kingston, Ont., where Olympic sailing competition is to be held.

The hockey Vikings travel to Kamloops for games Saturday and Sunday against Cariboo College. Vikings, enjoying their best season in a long time, are leaders of the Vancouver Island Hockey League.

Twenty-four UVic competitors are entered in the women's events Saturday in the Pacific Northwest invitational rowing championships at Green Lake in Seattle. Rowers will compete in 1000-metre events in lightweight, novice heavyweight and senior heavyweight fours, novice and senior eights and novice singles.

On Sunday, at Lake Washington, the 10-man UVic team will be rowing in the two-and-a-half-mile men's race. Strong opposition is expected from defending-champion Western Washington and University of Washington.

UVic volleyball teams are also out of town. The Vikings are going to Vancouver for Saturday's UBC invitational tournament. The Vikettes, meanwhile, are in Bellingham for Saturday's Bellingham invitational event.

Eight sailors from UVic are entered in a regatta Saturday at UBC.

FIELDS

Top Harriers Competing

Strong fields are guaranteed in the open events of the Canadian Cross-Country Championships at Beaver Lake Park on Saturday.

The six-race championships, co-sponsored by University of Victoria and Invictus Track Club of Victoria, has drawn 343 athletes, including two from Newfoundland's Memorial University.

Although defending champion Glenda Reiser of Ottawa, picked for the Ontario team, has decided not to compete, there are at least five strong contenders in the 4000-metre event. Thelma Wright and Maureen Crowley of Vancouver, Clare Morgan and Abby Hoffman of Ontario and Vicki Foltz of the Seattle Falcon Track Club are expected to be close at the finish.

Defending champion Grant McLaren of the University of Western Ontario will be the favorite in the 12,000-metre men's open race which has drawn 94 entries. But he'll face strong opposition from Bob Moore and Dan Shaughnessy of Ontario, Larry Switzer of Manitoba, Knut Kvalheim of the Oregon Track Club and Tom Howard of Vancouver. Kvalheim could be the surprise. He is a former Norwegian international runner.

In the 8000-metre junior men's event, former-Victorian John Wheeler of University of British Columbia rates as the one to beat.

Six provincial teams are entered in the 6000-metre juvenile men's race, which is considered a wide open affair.

Victoria's Tom Griffin is given a good chance in the 4000-metre midget boys' race which features three high-school teams from Ontario. B.C. has the only provincial team entered.

In the midget girls'

3000-metre race, another Victorian, Ulla Hansen, is highly rated.

The opening ceremonies will begin at 11:45 a.m. and the first event, the junior men's, is slated to start at noon.

Program:
Noon — Junior men's (8000 metres).
12:45 p.m. — Open women's (4000 metres).
1:15 — Open Men's (12,000 metres).
2:15 — Midget boys (4000 metres).
2:45 — Midget girls (3000 metres).
3:15 — Juvenile men's (6000 metres).

China, Russia Are Fighting Fierce War in UN

By GEORGE BRIA

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — A Soviet diplomat made a thrust with an imaginary knife and slowly twisted the blade.

"That," he told a reporter, "is what China is doing to us."

Two years after the vote that gave the People's Republic of China the seat held by Nationalist Taiwan, Peking's presence here is marked largely by fierce warfare with Russia.

"The Chinese see Russians hiding under every table and vice versa," a Western diplomat said.

Top delegates of the rival Communist giants broke up a Security Council meeting on the Mideast war Oct. 23 with an arm-waving and shouting match.

"You should do things with style," Chinese deputy foreign minister Chiao Kuan-hua castigated Soviet Ambassador Jacob Malik after order was restored. "I have known you for decades. You have never changed your habits."

And Malik retorted, "If China had given the Arab world as many automatic weapons, rifles, tanks, rockets, planes as the amount of bile it has poured out here in the United Nations Security Council against the Soviet Union, the Arabs would feel some benefit from the help of China."

The Russians are particularly touchy about Chinese criticism of their Middle East policy. The Chinese accuse them of double-dealing by supporting the Arabs but also helping Israel by allowing Russian Jews to emigrate there. Aside from its running battle with the Soviet Union, the Chinese UN delegation here has scored impressively in its first two years as the champion of undeveloped countries from Asia, African and Latin America.

Delegates from these Third World countries spilled enthusiastically into the aisles of the General Assembly hall to applaud and shake hands with Chiao after his annual policy speech in September.

While hitting hardest at the Russians, the Chinese have not spared the United States. They accuse Moscow and Washington of contending for world dominion and also conspiring together.

Since their arrival in the fall of 1971, the Chinese have become familiar figures in the streets of New York.

Some have brought their wives to live in the Chinese mission, a 10-storey former motel on Manhattan's West Side for which they paid a reported $4.85 million. A lack of children there is explained by difficulties in educating a Chinese in a foreign country.

All trace of the Nationalist Chinese who held the UN seat for 26 years is gone except for Nationalist publications which regularly arrive through the mail addressed to UN reporters.

After two years, Chiao told the assembly: "We wish to say frankly that what we have experienced in the United Nations has caused us to become worried. Speeches are multiplying and resolutions piling up."

But if Peking has some unhappiness about the United Nations, Chinese Ambassador Huang Hua has suggested the Russians are even less happy than in the days when they regularly assailed the "Chiang Kai-shek clique."

Watergate Advances Nomenclature Quiz

By DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) — I recently ran across a little quiz on group nomenclature. See how well you can do on it. If a group of lions is called a pride and a group of geese is called a gaggle, what are groups of hens, cats, toads, peacocks, leopards, pheasants, herons, bears and swans?

Answer: Brood of hens, clowder of cats, knot of toads, muster of peacocks, leap of leopards, eye of pheasants, siege of herons, sloth of bears, wedge of swans.

These are good things to know if your social life is centred around veterinarians. Otherwise, your chances of working them into everyday conversations are rather slim.

How often, for example, do you have an opportunity to say, "Did you happen to see a muster of peacocks strutting in this direction?"

Or, "Isn't that a leap of leopards over there by the carriage house?"

Not very often, I dare say.

On the whole, you probably would be better off learning the names of groups that enter into ordinary discussions, such as arguments over the Watergate case.

Here are a few group names that can be used in good advantage in Watergate debates:

"How much longer are those blasted hearings going to continue?"

"A long time. The committee still has a large garble of witnesses waiting to testify."

"Why does it take them so long to interrogate a witness?"

"Many witnesses spend a lot of time conferring with their attorneys. Some of them have a whole cavil of lawyers advising them."

"Are they afraid their testimony might be incriminating?"

"Yes. There is already a good-sized venal of defendants under indictment as a result of the Watergate investigation."

"There certainly are. It will take a whole cudgel of judges to try all of those cases. What political impact do you think the Watergate scandals will have?"

"With a garble of senators up for re-election next year, the consequences could be far-reaching. I expect that both parties will have a grapple of candidates seeking the presidential nomination."

"Could be. The outcome of the national conventions probably will hinge on a dublety of uncommitted delegates. The winning candidate will need to hire a muddle of campaign workers and a bosh of speechwriters. But he can't do that unless he lines up a jangle of contributors."

"Right. It should be a close race with a small quaim of voters making the difference."

What Year As Mayor Teaches — Humility

About 200 people attended a Victoria Chamber of Commerce luncheon at the Empress Hotel Wednesday to see and hear the candidates for mayor of Victoria and Oak Bay interviewed by seven members of the news media.

The candidates were Mayor Peter Pollen, the incumbent in Victoria and his challenger Bill Hollick; Oak Bay incumbent Mayor Frances Elford and Ald. Brian Smith, who is running against her.

They were questioned by newsmen from Victoria's two daily newspapers, one weekly publication, three radio stations and one television station.

Pollen asked by one reporter why he had changed his mind so often about the controversial Reid Centre proposal.

Pollen admitted that he had "told the press the last proposal was a wonderful compromise and all that," but he added that he never really did like the project.

Pollen warned that unlimited growth would lead the city into disaster. He said projections indicating more than $100 million worth of construction in the city next year are "somewhat horrifying."

At the same time, Pollen used the same figures to counter arguments that the city had stifled development.

He drew laughter from the audience with his answer to a question as to whether he had learned anything important during his first term of office.

"Humility," he quipped, but then he added that he had learned to work with city council for a common goal.

Hollick wouldn't commit himself on amalgamating Victoria with one or more of its neighboring municipalities.

He said he would abide by the decision of the people. The question of amalgamation, he said, could only be decided by a referendum.

Hollick said Victoria needs more development to cope with future growth. The present council, he said, had impaired development. Asked why the city of New York is bankrupt if unlimited development generates unlimited tax revenue, Hollick said, "because of bad management by New York's last mayor."

Mrs. Elford said she will stand by her belief that Oak Bay must introduce a limited amount of development other than single-family homes to strengthen its tax base.

The riding academy site, she said, should be used for a housing development.

"If we could afford to use it for a park, fine, but I don't think we can afford it," she said.

She also pointed out that if the site had been sold to the provincial government, Oak Bay council would have received assurances that no housing project would be built on it unless it met with council's explicit approval.

Mrs. Elford said she is against outright amalgamation with Victoria and other area municipalities because a bigger municipality doesn't necessarily assure better government.

Besides, the Capital Regional Board was an excellent vehicle to achieve goals common to two or more municipalities, she said.

Smith made it clear that he differed with his opponent's views on development.

He said, "Oak Bay people are against the encroachment by development and high-rises." They want to preserve the area as it is, he said.

Asked why he was running for mayor, Smith said it was "time for a change. It isn't healthy to have long-term entrenched positions on council."

He also came out strongly against amalgamation:

"Amalgamation is a stupid, backward and Neanderthal step," he said. He just didn't like the idea of a great civic bureaucracy stretching all the way from the Saanich Peninsula to south Oak Bay, he said.

All four candidates expressed support for the idea of elected officials having to disclose all their financial interests, but they rejected the idea of making the disclosures public.

The said disclosures should be registered with the provincial attorney-general's office, but not published.

Future Look For Airport

A 20-year forward look at Victoria's airport needs will be taken at a meeting set for 9:00 a.m. Friday in the Empress Hotel, organized by the federal transport ministry.

The meeting will lay initial groundwork for future expansion plans for Victoria International Airport, as part of the ministry's program for all B.C. commercial airports.

Invitations have been sent to service clubs, airline officials, the three levels of government and others to attend, said transport official Des Allard of Vancouver. The meeting is expected to create a planning review committee for the airport to study and plan future needs.

"We want advice from the community on a co-operative basis," Allard said.

Lighting Criticized By Jury

The driver was cleared and the victim was blamed when a coroner's jury sitting in Colwood reached a decision late Tuesday on a recent fatal traffic accident in Sooke.

The jury ended an inquest into the death of Niels Christian Nielson, 84, by finding no fault on the part of driver Robert George Martin, 27, of Sooke, while finding Nielson at fault in crossing Sooke Road while wearing dark clothing in a poorly-lit area.

Nielson was hit in the 5700 block Sooke Road on the evening of Nov. 7 after getting off a bus across the street from his residence at the Sunny Shores Resort. The jury also was critical of street lighting in the area.

Official Kit Answers Questions

Safari in Bilingual Jungle

OTTAWA (CIP) — In an effort to relieve "anxieties and misunderstanding," the official languages bureau will distribute 40,000 copies of a Safari Kit to help public servants make their way through the bilingualism jungle.

The kit consists of two booklets. One, entitled Twenty Questions . . . And a Few More on Canada's Official Languages, answers the questions Keith Spicer, the official language commissioner, says he is most often asked.

The other booklet, The Jungle Book on Official Languages, is illustrated with cartoons and defines the responsibilities of departments involved in the bilingualism program.

Spicer said in an interview Wednesday that one of his biggest responsibilities is to change the climate surrounding the Official Languages Act.

And the best way to get a controversial message across is with humor.

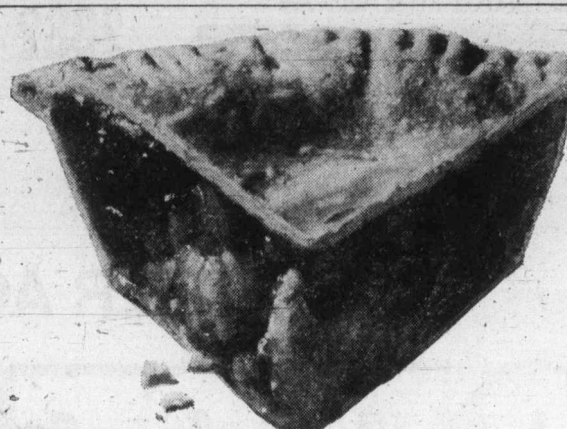

"The country that laughs together, lasts together," he said.

"Bilingualism, like capitalism, communism and ketchup, offers at least 57 varieties," Spicer says in a preface to The Jungle Book.

"The interested citizen — especially the federal employee — who wants to glimpse a little light through the thicket of programs, policies, jurisdictions, and Acts of Parliament affecting official languages, need not feel shame at bewilderment."

"Bureaucratic fallibility notwithstanding, my colleagues and I have long thought somebody ought to have a go at a kind of survival kit, for the roughly 400,000 federal employees who, to greatly varying degrees, are called on to make Parliament's wish for linguistic fair play a reality . . ."

The brochure, he says, "sketches out a brief but nuts-and-bolts do-it-yourself guide" for those who want to do more than "muddle through with the fascinating job of getting and keeping our two official languages on an equal footing."

Jolly Along There

Every year it seems that the season to be jolly starts earlier than ever. Like football and hockey schedules, Christmas time seems to get longer. Christmas came to Mayfair shopping centre as worker Nick Fai was busily engaged in putting up decorations, and to downtown Victoria where Harold Hetherington and Dave Dewar were at work.

New Branch Head for Planning

UVic professor Colin Campbell has been appointed head of the new research section of B.C. parks branch's planning division.

Parks director Robert Ahrens announced Wednesday that Campbell started work for the branch last month. He will be responsible for research into many areas of park use, particularly trends in attendance and population at parks "and all areas of interest which many have an effect on the preservation protection and expansion of the provincial parks system."

Campbell was previously an assistant professor of geography at UVic.

Thirty-four mayors, aldermen and senior municipal officials from communities across B.C. will attend a community emergency planning course in Victoria Nov. 22 and 23.

Provincial Secretary Ernest Hall said the course, sponsored by civil defence, would be run three times a year to help both elected and appointed senior civic officials develop their "peacetime emergency preparedness programs."

B.C.'s tree-fruit growers will vote between Nov. 30 and Dec. 12 in a government-sponsored plebiscite on tree-fruit marketing.

Agriculture Minister David Stupich said that all growers operating an acre or more of planted fruit trees in the southern Interior would be eligible to vote on the issue but the onus was on growers to ensure their name appeared on voting lists.

Those on the lists will then vote by mail and the ballots will be counted in front of a judge. Stupich said the plebiscite was being held "because of unrest in the industry and the continued flouting of marketing regulations by some growers."

The Legislature earlier this month authorized the vote.

Gail Frejd, now staff representative for Vancouver Island branch of the B.C. Association for the Mentally Retarded, has been appointed regional 4-H specialist with the B.C. agriculture department's youth development branch.

Miss Frejd, a native of Port Alberni, will be responsible for organizing of 4-H activities in the Peace River, Prince George, Robson Valley, Quesnel, Williams Lake, Vanderhoof and Smithers areas.

Book Burners Roasted

NEW YORK (UPI) — Author Kurt Vonnegut Jr., whose "Slaughterhouse Five" novel was confiscated and burned by school officials in Drake, N.D., said Wednesday, "those children fill have a delicious memory of adults. It's a rotten education for the kids to see."

Drake school superintendent Dale Fuhrman and the town school board ordered three dozen copies of the antiwar novel burned last Thursday after a high school sophomore girl complained about profanity in it.

"I'm glad of the freedom to make soldiers talk the way they ro talk," Vonnegut said.

"The normal way to get rid of trash is to burn it," Fuhrman said in explaining the book burning.

Vonnegut said in his New York apartment, "the only effect of 'Slaughterhouse Five' is to make the reader a pacifist. Nothing in the book urges people to take any sexual action at all."

The novel, a strong antiwar statement, describes the allied firebombing of Dresden, Germany, in the Second World War, through the eyes of five characters who survived the ordeal by taking shelter in a slaughterhouse meat locker. Vonnegut was among the five.

Area's Beauty Concern

Cliff Walk Shelved

Plans for a waterfront promenade along the steep Dallas Road cliffs were shelved Tuesday by Victoria city council's public works committee.

The decision to forget about the proposal for the time being came following a brief discussion at which most aldermen agreed that the scheme even if it were acceptable, would be very low on the city's list of priorities.

Some aldermen, however, weren't even willing to support the proposal no matter how high or low its priority might be.

Ald. Sam Bawlf said he had serious doubts about the advisability of interfering with the area's natural beauty.

The proposal was made in a study prepared by the city's engineering department.

It suggested that a pedestrian walkway be built at the foot of the cliffs along Dallas Road between Cook and Paddon. The study said the promenade should be built not only to open the area to the public, but also to counteract erosion.

The report was "received and filed" on Mayor Peter Pollen's motion.

Canadian Painters Test Limits of Art

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian artists currently are testing the limits of what can be called art, says the author of a new history of Canadian painting, Dennis Reid of the National Gallery of Canada.

Reid, 30, a native of Hamilton and curator of post-Confederation art at the gallery here, also said in an interview that artists in Quebec approach the subject differently than artists in English-speaking provinces.

"The cultural scene is much more a moving force in the community in Quebec, as a political element and as a way of motivating social action," he said.

"This is not so in English Canada. I think it is interesting that in Ontario, it seems the only way an expenditure on culture can be justified is if it is seen as education — something concrete in return for the dollar.

"That's not necessarily bad," he added quickly. "But it is different, and it has led to quite different attitudes to culture and probably more difficulties for the painter."

The French-Canadian approach to art, as opposed to the English-Canadian approach, has long historic roots which Reid recounts in his book, A Concise History of Canadian Painting, to be published by Oxford University Press, Toronto.

Reid's history traces Canadian painting from its earliest days to about 1965. He said it was necessary to cut off the story then because the history of the past decade cannot yet be seen in perspective.

Tally-Ho Fears Worst

The horse-drawn sightseeing vehicles may disappear from the streets of downtown Victoria unless the Tally-Ho operators are told by the end of this month where they will be located next year.

At least that's what John Olson, the firm's owner, said in a letter to city council.

The letter is in reply to city council's warning earlier this year that all sightseeing firm operators will have to vacate the Causeway at the Inner Harbor waterfront next summer.

One of the suggested sites to accommodate all tourist vehicles is the Marathon property next to the Wax Museum but Olson said in his letter that the steep access to the property would rule out horse-drawn vehicles.

The horses, he said, could injure their shoulders and tear nails out of their shoes trying to pull a loaded vehicle up a steep slope.

Olson said his firm must decide before Nov. 30 whether or not to pick up an option on a James Bay site for its summer barn. If it exercises the option on a two-year lease and later finds the city's new location for sightseeing vehicles to be unsuitable, the firm would lose $10,000, Olson added.

Shops Protest In France

PARIS (UPI) — France's price war gained in intensity as taxi drivers went on strike for higher fares and housewives crowded food shops to stock up against a 24-hour shut-down by restaurants and small retailers. Traders estimated one million shops would put up their shutters — the food shops and restaurants which are protesting government-ordered price controls, and laundries, gas stations, auto repair shops and betting offices which are striking in sympathy. Supermarkets are staying open in an anti-strike move.

Centre, Water Top Issues

The controversial $967,000 recreational centre referendum and the cost of adequate fresh-water supply for the town, were the main topics argued at Sidney all-candidates meeting Wednesday night.

Sidney Mayor Stanley Dear told an audience of about 125 that if the referendum is successful Saturday, it is hoped the centre, which will contain an ice rink, curling ice, and a swimming pool, will be completed by next fall.

He also said taxes will not be affected by the building of the centre until 1975.

Dear is seeking a third term as mayor in the municipal elections Saturday.

His opponent in the mayoralty race, Ald. Fred Robinson, told the meeting that he was against the referendum as it stood. He would like to see it postponed for four or five months until it can be thoroughly studied. He also said he would try and persuade the adjacent municipalities to build the centre on a joint basis.

Robinson expressed concern over future expenses of the town, "not the ones on the books now."

He said he was worried about a possible eight or 10-mill tax increase to bring fresh water to the town from Greater Victoria.

He also said Sidney could be given city status in about three years. It would then have the expense of supplying its own fire and police protection.

Currently Sidney is policed by the RCMP and has a volunteer fire department.

Ald. Chris Andersen, seeking re-election to his second term, said he firmly supported the recreational centre referendum.

Andersen said he believed the project would help bind the community together.

He also stressed he would press to have the town's current storm drain program completed in two years and paid for during a 20-year period, because the construction costs keep increasing. If completed in one step it would be a saving to the taxpayer, he said.

Bernard Ethier, 2245 James White Boulevard, is making his fourth bid for a council seat.

"This is my fourth try and I've been beaten in all of them ... and I don't care," he said with a grin. He said he supported the referendum.

Ald. Peter Malcolm, seeking re-election, said he supported the referendum and also favored no further development in Sidney until "we can solve the chronic water supply problem."

Stanley Uren, 9383 Maryland Drive, making his first bid for a seat on council, said he supported the referendum and was interested in the welfare of the community for both the aged and the young.

Replying to questions about the cost of bringing water to Sidney, Dear said there were no current figures on the actual cost.

He said that he was certain that some of it would be absorbed by the federal and provincial governments.

Touted Meeting For Candidates Loses All Punch

By JON FERRY
Colonist Reporter

Gordon Head Ratepayers' Association, a 11-candidates' meetings of recent years have had the reputation of being the Grey Cup of Saanich pre-election activities.

Wednesday night's meeting at the Gordon Head Parish Church hall did not live up to this expectation, except in the numbers of ratepayers that turned up and lined the unit streets with their parked cars.

Attendance was 200 but the barbs that were thrown and the liveliness of debate hardly did credit to its awesome rating among candidates for the Saanich civic elections.

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis scampered in lively fashion to the rostrum and welcomed the "old antagonists" among the audience. But these antagonists appeared to be missing Wednesday night.

Questions from the floor after the candidates had, trotted out their platforms were mostly sober and sensible, uncolorful and uncontroversial.

Even ratepayer ire about a municipal planning proposal for a shopping centre at San Juan and Tyndall was dampened by assurances from all candidates that there would be community discussion about the plan — and more community discussion.

In defending the $4 million-plus referendum to go before Saanich ratepayers Saturday, Curtis reiterated his plea for a municipal patriotism free of parochialism.

He suggested setting up a Saanich community ratepayers association with delegates from all area ratepayers associations that could "reflect the views of all residents of Saanich."

Co-chairman of the meeting, Barrie Gault, president of the Gordon Head and district Ratepayers' Association, said the idea "has long been considered by various ratepayer groups."

But while various candidates dished out accolades to Curtis, who takes his bow after nine years of municipal leadership, and council performance in recent years, aldermanic candidate Foster Isherwood warned of the dangers of a "mutual admiration society" among local politicians.

Isherwood, a controversial critic of the way the referendum has been presented to ratepayers, said he was not "against the referendum itself" but feared that local government would become "pretty lackadaisical and tame" without "honest debate and active participation."

Marathon In Sex Blasted

RICHMOND, Va. (UPI) — Circuit court Judge James Lumpkin ruled Wednesday that the controversial "pornochic" movie The Devil in Miss Jones violates Virginia's anti-obscenity laws.

Lumpkin issued his ruling on the film after hearing testimony late last month and early this month. The movie played at the Biograph theatre last summer for nine days, attracting near capacity audiences, before Lumpkin issued a temporary order shutting it down.

Lumpkin's written opinion called the film "lowdown, common trash" and said "You've got to see it to believe it ... that such matters are publicly exhibited."

He said 70 to 75 per cent of the movie was a "sex marathon" and said it proves that "given the right audience, any depraved spectacle may provide entertainment."

The trial was conducted under civil statutes and no penalty was imposed on the theatre's management. Commonwealth's attorney Aubrey Davis, however, said that future obscenity cases will be tried under criminal statutes.

Nicholson Nears End of Career

Canadian Happy with Suez Job

By KEVIN DOYLE

CAIRO (CP) — Canada's military commander in the Middle East has drawn one of the toughest assignments in his 32 years of active service as he approaches the end of his armed forces career.

Brig.-Gen. Douglas Nicholson, who works 18 hours a day but describes his job as "pleasant, full of surprises," is about to begin his final year in a military role.

"It's a hell of a way to go but it's the only way," he said as he talked about his command of the Canadian peacekeeping forces — expected to reach about 600 troops — now assembling here.

Nicholson's career began in 1940 after graduation from Queen's University in Kingston, Ont., and took him to Europe with the 5th Canadian Armored Division during the Second World War and to the Middle East with the first United Nations Emergency Force in 1956 as well as a score of appointments within Canada.

At the moment, however, one of his main concerns is finding more suitable permanent accommodation for his men.

In an interview with The Canadian Press he said troops can continue to live in tents without adequate washroom facilities, medical equipment, showers and other amenities for the time being.

"But the housing accommodation needs another look to say the least. We have several possibilities in mind but our over-all organization is still being worked out," said the 52-year-old native of Cornwall, Ont.

Nicholson, who retires in January, 1975, says he expects parts of the Canadian contingent — made up mainly of communications personnel — may begin to move up to positions at or near the cease-fire lines around the Suez canal soon, perhaps within a week.

The Canadians would likely have at least one large communications contingent near the canal and possibly two, he added. There also has been some discussion about establishing communications systems in Israel.

The commander, who served for a year with the first UN peacekeeping force in the Middle East when it was set up in 1956, said the Canadians now are going through their most difficult period.

"There is so much uncertainty about what we are going to be doing, and when, that it makes organization extremely difficult at this point. All we can tell the men, really, is that they have to wait and see."

In another sense, however, the current period provides insurance against boredom and low morale.

"As long as the men are fully occupied in getting the camp into shape and building facilities, there's a sense of movement that seems to keep everyone in high spirits," said Nicholson, as a young corporal uttered a string of expletives when a tent collapsed in disarray.

"It's afterwards, when the men take up their positions and start the routine of providing communications support that the real danger sets in," he added, undeterred by the corporal's dismay.

He said the Canadians are waiting anxiously for a decision by the UN or whether they or the Poles, with whom they are sharing the communications role, will be chosen to provide the supply facilities for the peacekeeping force, which may reach a total of 7,000 men.

The supply function would involve providing the force with transport, food, medical supplies and various other services.

"We could take care of it but we can't make the decision," said Nicholson.

Brig.-Gen. Douglas Nicholson

Extortion Charges Admitted

EDMONTON (CP) — Two Edmonton men pleaded guilty Tuesday to extorting $50,000 from a city businessman earlier this year and were remanded to Nov. 20 for sentencing.

Pre-sentence reports were ordered by provincial Judge Dean Saks for Gilbert Goudreau, 21, and Roy Douglas Stephenson, 30.

Court was told the men demanded $50,000 from Thomas Eugene Campanelli, part owner of three restaurants, in exchange for keeping quiet about one of Campanelli's business practices. The men picked up the money but were immediately apprehended by police.

Goudreau and Stephenson threatened to notify Kentucky Fried Chicken officials that Campanelli was buying prepared chicken from their outlets and selling it as southern fried chicken in his restaurants.

Crown prosecutor Harry Pickard said there is nothing illegal about the practice.

Peerage Declines In Britain

By PETER EBERT

LONDON (AP) — The British peerage is in decline, and the foremost nobility-watcher wants Queen Elizabeth to do something about it.

Fifty titles have been wiped out in the last 10 years, reducing the ranks of the peerage to 962. The toll includes two dukedoms, Windsor and Leeds, a marquessate, five earldoms and 10 viscounties. "For the first time a closed caste has been created. With no new blood, the hereditary elements of the peerage are gradually diminishing," writes Patrick Montague-Smith, editor of Debrett, the definitive guide to the British titled classes.

Montague-Smith, in an introductory editorial in the 1973-74 edition, notes that the decline is due to the reluctance of prime ministers, largely for political reasons, to recommend persons to the Queen for hereditary honors.

The last hereditary peerage created was in 1965, when Conservative politician John Morrison became Viscount Margdale. By contrast, more than 200 life peerages have been created since the system was introduced in 1958 to rejuvenate the political life of the House of Lords.

The hereditary system has also suffered by the decisions of several members of the House of Commons. Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home was once the Earl of Home, 14th in the line of one of Scotland's most noble families.

Montague-Smith, lamenting the decline of the hereditary principle, suggests that Queen Elizabeth should step in to halt the trend.

He says she "could create a very limited number of non-political peerages for our most distinguished citizens without reference to the prime minister. The hereditary principle would then be seen to continue in the peerage, as it does in the monarchy."

Montague-Smith's proposal is not expected to find favor in royal circles, however, and the number of peers will probably continue to decline.

An indication of current royal thinking came last week with the statement by Buckingham Palace that Capt. Mark Phillips is unlikely to be elevated to the peerage on his marriage to Princess Anne.

The palace said Phillips would not be offered a title "for a considerable time after the wedding, if ever."

This was in marked contrast to the situation 12 years ago when Anthony Armstrong-Jones married Princess Margaret.

Apparently under royal pressure, he reluctantly agreed to become the Earl of Snowdon because it seemed inconceivable then that a princess' children should be untitled.

More Snow For Hope

VANCOUVER (CP) — Another heavy snowfall is forecast for the upper Fraser Valley today, with as much as four inches expected in the Hope area. The first heavy fall of the winter hit the valley overnight Wednesday, causing power blackouts and scores of motor accidents, from the Abbotsford-Mission area east to the Fraser Canyon. Hope got a foot of snow.

Four Steps to Easier Christmas Cake Baking

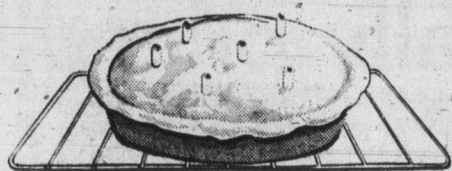

With Christmas just over a month away, here's several timely suggestions to help make fruit cake preparation easier.

1. Line fruit cake pans with double thickness of foil.
2. Combine sifted dry ingredients with washed and thoroughly dried fruit.
3. Butter, eggs and liquids should be at room temp. before mixing.
4. Wrap cooled baked cakes in foil or transparent wrap. Store in covered containers to mellow.

STORE HOURS: 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Mon., Tues., Wed. and Sat. — Shop 'til 9:00 Thurs. and Fri.

Baking Hints Woodward's

Easy way to keep fruit pies from boiling over is to insert about six (1½ inch long) pieces of uncooked macaroni into the top crust. The macaroni act as 'little chimneys' with juices boiling up inside instead of flowing over the sides.

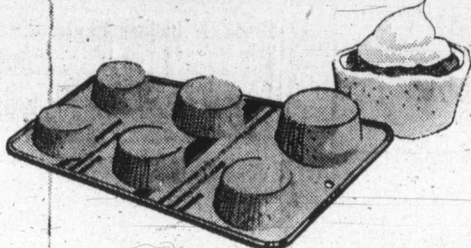

To prevent a film on top of cooked pudding and pie fillings, press plastic wrap directly on hot filling; cool then refrigerate. Peel paper off when set and ready to use.

For crumb pie shell, place crumbs in pie plate, then using a smaller pie plate, gently mold crumbs between.

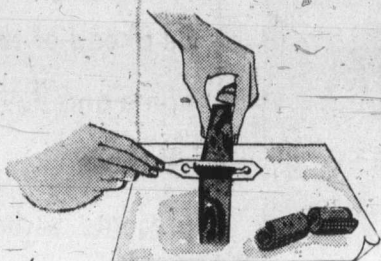

Transfer flaky pastry that just has been rolled out to pie plate, roll dough up and over rolling pin and gently lift from pastry board to plate; carefully unroll into place.

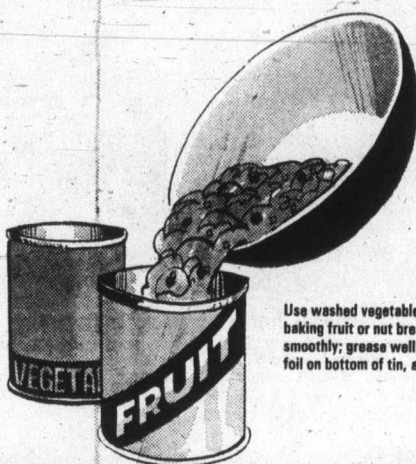

For quick tart shells, fit pastry over inverted muffin cups or custard cups; pinch a pleat in several places. Prick well. Bake and cool before filling.

To avoid a greasy appearance on top of fruitcake, cream butter and sugar thoroughly. For a moist fruitcake, place a pan or tin of water along side cake when baking in oven.

For chocolate curls for decorating, use a vegetable peeler. Draw the blade across a plain chocolate candy bar, or chocolate square. Presto, jumbo curls with a bar, or small ones from a square.

Use washed vegetable or fruit tins for baking fruit or nut bread. Cut out tops smoothly; grease well; place circle of foil on bottom of tin, add batter.

Challenge to St. John Retired Group

'Accidents of Loneliness' Waiting for Help

Members of the St. John Ambulance Retired Group were challenged Wednesday to use their experience in St. John and in their daily living to help others—specifically the lonely.

"I know of people in this community who are in very great need of companionship to keep them in contact with everyday things," she told the group.

"When you live by yourself, every day is the same ... days tend to run one into the other, and more especially if you've been ill, bereaved or had a traumatic experience."

As people grow older they are supposed to be able to cope better with life, but this isn't always so, she said.

There were many who, at a time of trauma, somehow lost touch with the outside world, wanted to be alone and withdrew, then found themselves without regular friends.

A survey of some residential hotels in Victoria this summer indicated that 97 per cent of occupants had no close relatives in Victoria and that 90 per cent had no close friends.

Their worries were not so much financial as the fact that they did not have someone who belonged to them.

St. John Ambulance, she said, was synonymous with first aid. "We have a lot of accidents and we don't have to find them in the streets—they can be sitting in residential hotels. They are accidents of loneliness."

What they need, she said, is someone willing to spend as little as an hour a week with them, good listeners, "someone with the background of experience you have."

Most of them did not require the service of professional nurses.

"They need someone able to help them stay in their one room (where they desperately want to be). They want to know that someone will be coming in at three o'clock on Tuesday; it gives them something to look forward to."

An effort by St. John Ambulance Retired Group could, she said, delay the entry of many of these people into extended care and other institutions.

"Some folks wouldn't need to go so soon if they had someone who cared, someone who kept them close to reality."

Paris Fashion Great Schiaparelli Dies

PARIS (UPI) — Fashion designer Elsa Schiaparelli, who created the broad shouldered look of the '30s and '40s and popularized the color of "shocking pink," died Tuesday after suffering a stroke seven weeks ago, her daughter disclosed Wednesday. She was 77.

The Italian-born couturiere began her career by opening a sweater shop on the fashionable Rue de la Paix in 1928. Years later she gained lasting fame by launching the "wide shoulder," destined to dominate western women's fashion for a decade.

Her name was also associated with "shocking pink," the color of cyclamen pink she popularized in the '30s in her fashion house on the fashionable Place Vendôme.

Her daughter, the Marquesa Cacciapuoti Deigullano, said the designer died in a coma in her house off the Champs Elysees.

Schiaparelli, who will be buried Saturday dressed in an antique Chinese robe the color of "shocking pink," is survived by the marquesa, her only child, and two granddaughters—Marisa Berenson, the jet set cover girl and film actress, and Berry Berenson, wife of actor Anthony Perkins.

Schiaparelli retired from active designing in 1955, leaving behind a legendary career. Her customers included actress Joan Crawford and the Duchess of Windsor. Among her close friends she counted artists Pablo Picasso and Salvador Dali as well as the late designer Cristobal Balenciaga.

It was Schiaparelli who first opened a ready-to-wear boutique.

Home Builders Given Praise And a Warning

Victoria Home Builders' Association got a pat on the back Tuesday night along with a warning that the provincial government is keeping a close eye on the building industry.

Michael Hanson, consumer affairs officer for British Columbia, said at the association's dinner meeting in the Red Lion Motor Inn that the ordinary person is not in a position to judge if a house is properly structured.

Therefore the uninformed consumer must rely on the skill and honesty of the professional tradesman.

Hanson said the majority of building tradesmen were giving consumers their money's worth but there were some who took a maximum profit for a minimum of work and gave the industry a bad name.

Consequently government needed to watch the entire industry closely to protect the consumer.

"A house is the largest single outlay made in anyone's life," he told his audience of 65.

The motor trade field, which covered new and used cars and mobile homes, brought the largest number of consumer complaints, but Hanson said a rising number of complaints were being registered in the housing and building field.

Although a lot of the beefs were not valid, Hanson said those covering a building's fundamental structure were investigated.

Hanson said, too, it was incongruous that car dealers were required to be bonded while the home builder was not required to post a similar bond.

However he did praise the group for its membership in the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada which nationally has proposed a warranty program in an attempt to improve ethical standards in the tradesmen profession.

Consumer Head:

Ban Ads Aimed At Young

TORONTO (CP) — Marion Brechin, president of the Consumers Association of Canada, has criticized the Canadian Radio and Television Commission for endorsing the advertising industry's voluntary code for broadcasting advertising to children.

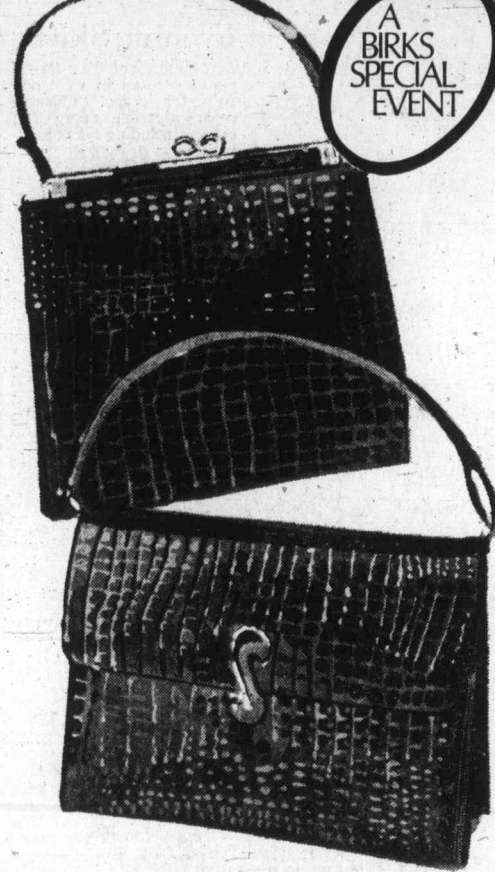

In a letter to the CRTC she said it should have sought "a complete ban on advertising directed to children."

In her letter, Mrs. Brechin said the association is concerned about the pre-Christmas "buildup of unreasonable expectations already under way." Children are being used as "unwitting sales agents" for toy manufacturers.

The CAC president said the most recent monitoring program of television commercials showed as many as 20 commercials in an hour of programming.

Prohibition Likely

Furnace Oil Pacts Eyed

OTTAWA (CP) — The government's new competition bill would probably prohibit oil companies from forcing buyers of furnaces to enter oil-purchase agreements, a spokesman for Consumer Affairs Minister Herb Gray said Tuesday.

The bill, introduced in the Commons Nov. 5, would empower the director of investigation and research in the department's combines branch to recommend a halt to such selling methods before the restrictive trade practices commission.

The commission could then order the practice to stop with penalties levied by the courts.

Oil company officials said Tuesday their companies commonly require customers who buy oil burners on credit to purchase the company's fuel during the life of the term payments.

Gray's spokesman said such cases would have to be dealt with finally by the courts. But "there certainly will be relief" under the bill.

A spokesman for Shell Canada Ltd. in Montreal, Gerry Maguire, said in an interview that his company issues separate contracts for cash sales of equipment and furnace oil.

But if a new customer buys the equipment on credit — in effect, borrowing money from Shell — he is required to sign the separate contract to buy the oil.

An official of Gulf Oil Canada Ltd., Roger Coderre, said Gulf follows a similar practice.

Maguire said Shell's credit customers must sign the oil contract to get the oil burner because Shell sells equipment on "favorable terms," and expects customers to buy its oil at the same time.

Erma Bombeck

There has never been a time in history when so many people want to help my hamburger.

I counted 18 boxed variations on the grocery shelf the other day, each one promising to change my hamburger from an ordinary humdrum meal into a gourmet belch.

The truth is, only one thing can help my hamburger — more meat.

I've tried to drown it in tomato sauce, brown it as a topping, roll it into little balls with rice and call it porcupine, combine it with every starch and cheese known to man, and it still looks like a contestant on Let's Make A Deal.

In fact, food prices have created suspicion among families and mistrust among close friends.

The other night I placed a platter in front of my husband. He looked at the broiled legs and thighs heaped on the plate and with his fork poised in mid-air asked, "What kind of meat is this?"

"It's chicken," I said flatly. "Why do you ask?"

"Because I have never seen an inch and a half thigh before."

"Would you believe it was the runt of the litter?"

"No."

"Where's my hamster?" asked our youngest suddenly.

"I told you," I explained patiently, "he escaped from his cage last week and is somewhere in the woodwork."

"I don't believe you," he whined.

"Look, gang," I said, "will you give me a break? We're living in a period of make-believe and synthetics. All I'm asking you to do is pretend the dressing is made from a bird instead of a box where you add only water. Pretend the gravy is from meat drippings instead of an envelope where you add only milk. Pretend the salad is from the earth instead of a hydroponic garden, and that the cake came from a mixing bowl and wasn't baked in its own foil pan.

"Pretend the milk is from a cow and the butter from a churn. Pretend you trust your mother."

"Not until you tell us what it is," squinted my husband.

"Okay! Okay! It's hamburger shaped like little chicken appendages."

"Then you eat it first," they ordered.

They think this is bad. Wait until next week when they see my hamburger-soy bean turkey wearing Supp-Hose to hold it together. It'll blow their minds.

School Was Only Happiness This Child Knew

LONDON (CP) — Maria Colwell was a bright, healthy, well-dressed seven-year-old when she was transferred from her foster home to that of her mother and stepfather under a court order.

But when her body was wheeled in a pram into a hospital by her parents six months later it weighed only 36 pounds and was covered with bruises.

Testimony before a government-ordered inquiry now in session shows that in the intervening months, neighbors, teachers, welfare workers, a doctor and police all had reasons at least to suspect that Maria was being mistreated.

Many who were concerned did not want to risk legal difficulties with Maria's family. Those who sought to help apparently ran into a bureaucratic blank wall.

The tragedy got wide publicity when Maria's unemployed stepfather, William Kepple, 43, was convicted of manslaughter and sentenced to eight years after beating her to death last Jan. 7 when he returned home from a pub. To neighbors, Maria had become the Cinderella of Brighton, the seaside resort where she lived. They soon noticed she was wearing ragged clothes while her sisters sported the clothes she had brought with her from her foster home.

Many People Had Reason To Suspect 'Cinderella' Was Being Mistreated

She started to lose weight. One neighbor saw her with both eyes blackened. When the other three children got candy and treats, Maria was left out. Her chores included dragging home heavy bags of coal.

School was the only happiness she knew. Teachers testifying this week at the inquiry into the operation of social services say Maria often remarked about the good food, asked for seconds, and was eager for the teachers' affection.

A policeman testified that he toured local pubs looking for the parents after spotting two of their children screaming at a bedroom window. A policeman who made a follow-up visit saw two other Kepple children, concluded they looked well fed and cared for, and the matter was dropped.

A doctor who examined her a month before her death gave her medicine for her stomach pains and made a later appointment, which was not kept.

A social worker supervising the case made numerous visits to the home but was barred from seeing the child. A school welfare officer said she was turned away by Kepple who swore at her and waved a leather strap.

But when neighbors and the former foster mother made inquiries they were told by social workers there was no need for alarm.

The school headmaster made inquiries and "I was told that three agencies had the matter under control and there was no need to pursue the case any further."

Maria, possibly through fear, would insist she got the cuts and bruises accidentally. Part of the problem was that under a mix-up many of the people who had direct dealings with her were not aware she was under the protection of a court order issued in a neighboring county.

The woman meant to carry out the court supervision order had no powers, without going through complicated official rigmarole, to insist on seeing the girl.

Government pathologist Dr. James Cameron said in evidence that bruising had made the child's body swell up half an inch all over and that it was the worst case he had seen in eight years of study.

He urged that when the inquiry report is written it should recommend legislation covering greater co-ordination among welfare agencies, power for workers to demand to see such a child and greater education in the medical profession to recognize child abuse.

Many family doctors do not come across it often, he said, and their "threshold of suspicion, would not be as low as mine."

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I saw myself in your column a few days ago. It was the letter from the bride who is going nuts because her husband stays out till all hours and "forgets" to telephone her. His alibis are always airtight. She trusts him. He just "forgets."

Well, I've got news for her. It's going to get worse so she'd better learn how to handle it.

The skunk will come home. They always do. Decide right now that no matter what time it is, no matter how many drinks he's had, you will NOT greet him at the door with, "Where in the hell have you been? I've been out of my mind worrying about you!"

Instead, smile (even if it almost kills you) and say "I'm glad you're home, dear. You need some rest. Let's go to sleep."

The next morning, don't say one word about last night. If he starts to apologize, say, "I understand, dear. Let's forget it."

I know what I'm talking about. It took me two years to make myself do it, but when I finally was able to, it cured him completely.—Victoria

Dear Vic: Non-violence and passive resistance are not only wise but they work wonders on erratic husbands with faulty memories. Congratulations. The greatest victory, of course, was the victory over yourself. It always is.

Dear Ann Landers: How does one decide which "worthy causes" to give to? While I have a good income and no dependents I can't give to everything. When I read about frauds and crooks it dampens my enthusiasm for any kind of giving because I don't know what is legitimate.

You must receive hundreds of appeals. Can you tell me please how a person can know what to give to? Or, to put it another way, on what basis should a person give?—Richard J.

Dear R. J.: Most people give to causes in which they have a special stake. If you've lost a dear one to cancer, you might be more inclined to donate to the Cancer Society, or a medical school that is doing cancer research. The same for heart or kidney disease.

We all know the Red Feather drives. Community Chests and United Appeal campaigns are 100 per cent legitimate and deserve the support of every citizen. The fund-raising appeals to be aware of are the unfamiliar ones. Check with the Better Business Bureau if you are in doubt.

October Figures

Grocery Prices Down, Living Cost Still Up

OTTAWA (CP) — Grocery prices dropped in October and eased rising living costs to the slowest pace in a year, Statistics Canada reported Wednesday.

The drop in supermarket prices—first decline in a year—was seven-tenths of one per cent, but food prices still stood almost 17 per cent above a year ago, the report said.

Increases in other major price categories raised the over-all Consumer Price Index by three-tenths of one per cent for October, the smallest monthly increase in the past year.

But living costs were still up 8.7 per cent over the past 12 months, for Canada's worst inflationary year since 1951.

The October increase pushed the index, measuring typical family living costs, to 154.3 from its 1961 base of 100.

The figure means it cost $15.43 last month for every $10 worth of goods and services a dozen years ago. That was four cents more than the previous month, and $1.23 more over the past year.

The slowing of the rise in living costs was the second major piece of improved economic news in a row for the embattled Trudeau government. Statistics Canada reported Tuesday a drop in the unemployment rate to 5.8 per cent from six per cent, and a substantial rise in new jobs.

But the Conservatives in Parliament could be expected to keep up their running fire of criticism against the Liberal government for the sharp rate of inflation in 22 years.

Although the October living costs rise was the smallest since a two-tenths of one per cent hike in November, 1972, the annual spread continued to move up. Prices were 8.7 per cent above October, 1972, compared with the September-to-September figure of 8.5 per cent and the August-to-August spread of 8.3 per cent.

The annual rise is the largest since a 10.6 per cent jump in the early Korean War year of 1951, and far above any other year since then. Last year's hike in living costs was 4.8 per cent.

Many economic analysts forecast little easing off inflation next year.

Major factors in the October price rise were a two per cent for health and personal care and three-tenths of one per cent for housing.

October consumer price indexes compared with September and a year ago:

|            | 1973  | 1972        |
|------------|-------|-------------|
|            | Oct.  | Sept., Oct. |
| All items  | 154.3 | 153.9 142.0 |
| Food       | 169.7 | 170.2 145.3 |
| Housing    | 154.9 | 154.4 145.2 |
| Clothing   | 142.3 | 139.5 134.4 |
| Transport  | 139.7 | 139.7 134.1 |
| Health     | 159.3 | 157.8 151.2 |
| Recreation | 147.8 | 147.2 140.3 |
| Tobacco    | 136   | 136.6 132.9 |

Figures after groups indicate their percentage in weight of all-items index.

Other increases were one-tenth of one per cent for transportation and four-tenths of one per cent for recreation, education and reading.

Over the past year, housing costs were up 6.7 per cent, clothing 5.9 per cent, transportation 4.2 per cent, health-personal care 5.4 per cent and recreation-education 5.3 per cent.

Food has been the chief factor in the past year's inflation. Although grocery prices declined in October, restaurant prices rose 2.1 per cent and were 17 per cent more than a year earlier, the report said. Grocery prices were 16.7 per cent higher over the year, and the two food categories combined averaged 16.8 per cent higher.

The decline in grocery prices last month was the first in a year and the largest in 17 months, Statistics Canada said.

The decline "was mainly attributable to lower prices for beef, pork, fresh fruit, beverages and some dairy products."

"The index for meat, poultry and fish fell 2.8 per cent, thus registering its first downward movement since last May."

"Retail price levels for beef and pork in early October averaged more than five per cent below those of a month earlier, contrasting with a 2.4 per cent rise in poultry prices," it added.

Slight Peking Shift Seen

Taiwan Remains U.S.-China Block

TOKYO (UPI) — The United States and China announced Wednesday they would expand their liaison offices, cultural and scientific exchanges and trade in a step-up of the momentum toward eventual establishment of diplomatic relations.

A joint communique, issued here on the arrival of State Secretary Henry Kissinger following his four-day visit to China, indicated the question of Taiwan remained the major obstacle to creation of full diplomatic ties.

However, high ranking American officials saw a slight shift in the Chinese approach that might lead to a possible breakthrough.

The communique issued by Washington and Peking said that Chinese leaders "reiterated that the normalization of relations between China and the United States can be realized only on the basis of confirming the principle of one China."

The United States stated in the communique that it acknowledged there was "but one China and Taiwan is part of China."

American officials said that in talks between Kissinger and premier Chou En-lai, the Chinese "made no specific demands for any specific action" related to Taiwan and that the statement concerning recognition of the principle of one China would be explored for its subtle nuances.

In the 1972 Shanghai communique issued after President Nixon's visit to China, Peking specifically called for withdrawal of all U.S. forces and dismantling of bases on Taiwan. This was announced publicly in Shanghai as the "ultimate objective" of the United States.

The number of American troops in Taiwan is progressively being reduced. A U.S. spokesman in Taipei said Wednesday that another 3,000 U.S. troops would be withdrawn by the end of the year, reducing troop strength to 6,000.

Whitlam Seeking Power Over Prices, Income

By VINCENT MATTHEWS

CANBERRA (CP) — Australians are to be given another opportunity to change the constitution that has been the framework of the nation's federal system for 72 years.

On Dec. 8 seven million voters will be asked to give the federal government power over prices and incomes. At present those powers are held only by the six state governments.

Prime Minister Gough Whitlam is calling for the powers so his Labor government can tackle inflation which now is the biggest political as well as economic issue in Australia.

But the chance of Whitlam gaining these powers is considered remote. Since federation in 1901, Australians have had 26 referendums seeking changes in the constitution. Only five have been successful—and only two of those five have been matters of substance.

The Australian tradition has been when in doubt to vote no at referendums.

Whitlam is facing even greater difficulty this time because the opposition parties, state leaders and the trade union movement are all lined up against the change.

The situation is frustrating for Whitlam. On the one hand he is being attacked for failing to act effectively against inflation and on the other his critics are trying to prevent his government from being given the powers to act effectively.

Whitlam tried to get the state governments to pass their power over prices and incomes to the federal government, but the premiers of the two biggest states, Victoria and New South Wales, refused. Such a referral of powers is constitutionally possible.

After this refusal, Whitlam took the only other step open to him—to get a constitutional change through a referendum.

For a referendum to succeed, it must gain support from a majority of electors throughout Australia and a majority of the electors in the six states.

There are differing motives among those opposing the referendum. State leaders are jealous of their powers and intend to keep them, even though only in South Australia is any attempt made to use government price control authority.

The opposition parties—Liberal and Country Party—are anxious to deprive the central government of any extra powers for fear that this could lead to what is called a "socialization" of Australia's economy.

The trade unions are opposing the income powers section of the referendum proposal because they fear that a future Liberal-Country Party government would be able to bring in a wage freeze. The unions, however, are in favor of the federal government being given power to control prices.

Undoubtedly, the referendum will be seen as a test of Whitlam's political prestige. If he is able to win the referendum, it would be an outstanding political triumph. But less than 11 months after coming to power, the electoral prospects generally for Whitlam are sombre.

Rapidly rising living costs, although a reflection of a world trend, have harmed the government's standing.

Acting on the advice of its economic experts, the government slashed tariffs, revalued the Australian dollar twice and increased interest rates. Higher interest rates meant that thousands of Australians buying homes had to pay more on mortgage repayments.

Australia leads the world in the number of people who own or are buying their own homes so it was a risky political exercise.

A by-election for the federal seat of Parramatta in New South Wales showed a seven-per-cent swing to the Liberals at the expense of Labor.

Public opinion polls showed a five-per-cent drop in support for the government.

In this climate, the opposition favored an early election.

Because the government is a minority in the Senate, any piece of government legislation, even a finance bill, can be blocked by the opposition. Although it has never been done in Australian federal history, opposition politicians have been threatening to reject a vital government finance bill which would force Whitlam to hold an election.

But Liberal Leader Billy Snedden has cautioned against such drastic action at this stage and suggested the opposition wait for six more months when another vital finance bill will come before Parliament.

Before then, Whitlam will have faced the people in his Dec. 8 referendum and there will have been an election for the state government in New South Wales.

In both cases, the opposition believes, the results might be a blow to Whitlam's prestige.

An Item: Burt and Dinah Going On Television

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Burt Reynolds doesn't make too many appearances on network television musicals, but in the case of Dinah Shore the centerfold boy was delighted to make an exception.

Dinah and Burt are what Hollywood calls an item.

In a less-complicated bygone day they would have been identified as sweethearts.

Viewers will be able to get an idea for themselves Nov. 18 when Dinah stars in her own hour-long special unsuitably titled In Search of the Ideal Man.

Clearly, Dinah's search is over. Burt will make a guest appearance on the show, marking the first time the love birds have appeared on a sketch together for the tube.

Other guests are Ed Asner (the boss on The Mary Tyler Moore Show), McLean Stevenson (of M-A-S-H), Don Knotts, Andy Griffith, Peter Graves, Ricardo Montalban and Telly Savalas.

"That's quite a lineup of attractive men," Dinah said with pride.

"In the past I've tried to work out most of my routines in a song sketch. But not this time. With all those good comedy actors we're just going to do the scenes without a lot of music."

"Burt will be a 'surprise guest.'"

There is little room for surprise. Dinah, whose eyes enlarge when she mentions Burt's name—not to mention a wide bright smile that won't go away—has told everyone her beau will appear on the show.

Presumably Reynolds won't be advertised in the billing. But it will hardly come with as much impact as an appearance by the tooth fairy when the mustache movie star lumbers on stage.

"Burt agreed to appear on the show, but he didn't tell me what he was going to say or do," Dinah said. "So I was surprised as anyone else when he reported to the set for the taping."

"He hired a writer and worked out a routine all on his own. Then when the cameras were going he had his own material and threw a bunch of unexpected lines at me."

Dinah laughed for a few minutes. "It was hysterical because I didn't know what he was going to do or say," she explained. "And we kept the segment on the show ad lib."

Dinah didn't say so, but it was evident the Reynolds spot is her favorite part of the show.

They have been friends, sweethearts, an item and lovers for almost two years now. Both try to avoid the glare of publicity by shunning public appearances in one another's company.

"Burt and I like to have dinner and watch a movie at my house, or maybe spend the evening in front of the television set," Dinah said. "We both work so hard we never seem to get enough time together."

"He's off in Georgia right now making a picture. I'm busy with my daytime show and putting together my golf tournament in Palm Springs."

Asner, Stevenson, Knotts, Griffith, Graves, Savalas and company may get billing ahead of Reynolds on the credits. But Burt is the main man with the star-on-the-show and off.

Japanese Play Numbers Game

TOKYO (UPI) — Planes flying into Tokyo International Airport will never taxi up to a gate 4 or 13.

In the old section of Tokyo University hospital, the room numbers contain no 45, 95, 145 or 195.

Tokyo's 36-storey world trade centre has nothing on its 13th floor but air conditioning equipment and generators. And even Japanese telephone numbers reserve the digits "42" for service, public and temporarily installed phones.

Americans may shudder at broken mirrors and black cats, but the Japanese view most of their superstitious energy on numbers, above all the number four!

"Four" in Japanese is

"shi." She also means death, and so the Japanese studiously avoid words that can be pronounced "shi" (she).

The situation becomes even more complicated because of all the ominous combinations

Crime Inquiry Postponed

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec Police Commission inquiry into organized crime was postponed to Nov. 27 because the commission is not ready to proceed with public hearings. Commission lawyer Michel Pothier said the inquiry will continue its gambling investigation phase when public hearings resume.

that are possible with shi and other numerals.

In the new general ward at Kyoto University Hospital the fourth floor has no Room 420, since that figure can be read "shinrei." Shinri rhymes with the Japanese word meaning dead, and rei means spirit or soul.

Moreover, the obstetric section of Sumitomo Hospital in Osaka rarely uses the number 43 as this could be read "shizan" meaning stillbirth in Japanese.

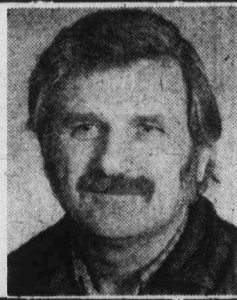

Then there is the number 24, which can be read "ni shi" or double death, resulting in all sorts of forbidden combinations such as 42, 44 and 402.

A number which runs a close second for ominous implications is nine, "ku" in Japanese. The reasoning is that ku rhymes with kutsu, which means worry or pain. As a result many Japanese hospitals are without rooms 9 or 19.

Although most hospitals have rooms numbered 13 (which adds up to 4), many hotels and airlines, as a concession to their foreign clients, leave 13 out of their numbering systems.

Japan Air Lines planes has no seats numbered 13, although it has seats numbered 4. And at the famed Imperial Hotel in Tokyo, bellboys never wear tags on their uniforms with a 13 on it.

But Someone Gets Mad Great Moments in Wax

SINGAPORE (UPI) — Singapore wants to capture in wax great moments from its experiences during the Second World War. But no matter how the officials go about it, someone gets mad.

A couple of years ago planners in the Singapore tourist promotion board thought it would be a good idea to build, on the very site where it happened, a wax museum showing the figures of the beaten British defenders of Singapore surrendering to the Japanese invaders at the beginning of the war.

It was suggested it would be great for the growing Japanese tourist influx to have the waxen image of the British leader, Lt. Gen. A. E. Percival, perhaps kneeling before the standing figure of Japanese Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita.

Angry British journalists based here fired off dispatches to their London papers calling the project an outrage — a shameful and low means of luring Japanese tourists to the island state which was British before the Japanese took it and British again after the Japanese lost it.

The plan was hastily ditched. "There were no official protests," said one diplomat from a British Commonwealth chancery. "The press reaction was sufficient for the Singaporeans to get the point."

Now the tourist board is reported to have commissioned a London firm of model makers to build a wax re-creation of what happened at the end of the war in Singapore — the British accepting the surrender of the Japanese.

But that scheme apparently is in trouble, too. A letter from a Japanese tourist leader has appeared in the Straits Times newspaper predicting "undesirable consequences from the tourist project."

The letter and answers to inquiries at the Japanese embassy are more inscrutable in their displeasure than the open rage shown by Britain for the earlier wax work surrender scene.

But things have clearly gone awry, especially at the tourist board.

Officials there declined any comment, refusing to acknowledge anything to do with the project even though it appears a good bet the new wax works is well enough along that Singapore's committed to paying for it — at an estimated cost of $217,000.

It's clear, too, the British are all for the wax scene this time. A central figure in it will be Lord Mountbatten, the wartime Far East Allied commander. He is to be depicted accepting the Japanese surrender on the steps of Singapore's city hall. A report from London says Mountbatten is so enthused by the project that his personal barber is doing the final touches on the former commander's waxen head.

Sangria—even the sound is delicious. It can be served chilled, or over ice garnished with slices of lemon and orange. Try a slice of fresh peach for an unusual touch. Ole!

REVELSTOKE, B.C. (CP) — Two men were killed Wednesday when their semi-trailer struck a boulder on the Trans-Canada highway and plunged down a 100-foot bank into the Illecilwaet river, 21 miles east of Revelstoke. Names of the men were withheld.

Provincial COURT

A Victoria motorist who admitted four previous convictions for impaired driving, three of them this year, was sentenced Wednesday in Victoria Provincial Court to one year in jail for a fifth similar conviction.

George Frederick Vaux, 41, of 132 Bay, pleaded guilty to a three-count Victoria charge dated Tuesday of being impaired while in care or control of a vehicle and operating it without insurance and while under a driving prohibition.

Vaux admitted a 1967 impaired-driving conviction in Duncan that brought him a fine and also agreed with a statement by prosecutor J. W. Anderson that Vaux had received three jail terms earlier this year for similar offences. The last was a six-month sentence received in May when Vaux also was banned from driving for two years. He was later paroled and still has some of that time to serve. That will be in addition to the year imposed by Judge William Ostler, who this time added a three-year driving ban.

In other court sections Tuesday, two drivers were sentenced to 14-day jail terms which are to be served on weekends.

Gordon Stewart Alberg, 31, of 1517 Cedar Glen, pleaded guilty before Judge F. S. Green to a charge of impaired driving Aug. 9 in Victoria and also was banned from driving for 10 months.

James Arthur Murray, 46, of 4060 Cedar Hill Cross Road, pleaded guilty before Judge Harold Alder to a Victoria charge of impaired driving and refusing to take a breath-analysis test Saturday and was sentenced to the jail term and a three-month driving ban on the first count and fined $200 on the second.

Three other persons appearing before Alder on separate charges of impaired driving pleaded guilty and were fined $350 each. They were Andrew George Barr, 17, of 1647 Monterey, stopped Sunday in Oak Bay; William Patrick James Hassett, 29, of 537 West Bay, checked Oct. 10 in Victoria; and Malden Daniel Harry, 33, Mill Bay, stopped Sept. 19 in the Colwood area.

Monte William Tucker, 30, address not known, was sentenced Wednesday by Green to a total of seven months in jail. Tucker pleaded guilty

Nov. 3 to a Victoria charge containing two counts of false pretences and one of obtaining food and lodgings by fraud.

George Frederick English, 22, no fixed address, was sentenced by Ostler to six months in jail after pleading guilty to a Saanich charge of uttering. The case involved a $140 Victoria city welfare cheque cashed in a Saanich bank Sept. 7 shortly after it was taken from a Victoria residence.

Danielle Marie Claire Barbeau, 17, and Denise Jisele May Turcotte, 18, both of 1180 Colville, were fined $250 each by Ostler and put on probation for six months. They pleaded guilty Oct. 31 to separate Victoria shoplifting charges that Miss Barbeau took five items worth a total of $83.98 Oct. 30 from The Bay and Miss Turcotte took two items worth $39.98 at the same time.

Robert William Bailey, 18, of 4578 Morland, was fined $75 following a plea of guilty to an RCMP charge of possession of marijuana Oct. 27 in the Colwood area.

Notice of Public Hearings on Possible Solutions to Certain Problems Facing Point Roberts

The International Joint Commission, a permanent Canada and United States body established by Treaty in 1929, will hold public hearings at the times and places noted below on possible solutions to certain problems facing the residents of Point Roberts.

In 1971 the Governments of the United States and Canada requested the International Joint Commission to investigate and recommend measures to alleviate certain conditions of life of residents of Point Roberts, Washington, existing by reason of the fact that the only connection by land between Point Roberts and other territory of the United States is through Canada. The Commission appointed the International Point Roberts Board to undertake the necessary investigations and to advise the Commission thereon. The Board has recently completed its studies and has submitted its report to the Commission entitled "Report to the International Joint Commission on Solutions to the Problems Facing the Residents of Point Roberts." The report is being distributed to interested individuals, organizations and government agencies. Copies may be obtained upon request by writing to the International Joint Commission in either Washington or Ottawa at the addresses noted below. Also, the Report and Appendix 'B' thereto "An Inventory of International Park Possibilities" are being made available for inspection in Canada at the following locations:

History and Government Division, Vancouver Public Library, 751 Burrard Street, Vancouver, B.C.

Water Survey of Canada, Room 502, 1001 West Pender Street, Vancouver, B.C.

Greater Victoria Public Library, Victoria, B.C.

The purpose of these hearings is to receive testimony and evidence relating to the report of the International Point Roberts Board. The Commission's hearings are international in nature and irrespective of the location in which they are being held, the citizens of both the United States and Canada are invited to attend and participate. Opportunity will be given to anyone, either on his own behalf or in a representative capacity, to offer pertinent information which may assist the Commission in the preparation of its report to the Governments of the United States and Canada on solutions to the problems facing Point Roberts.

At the hearings, statements may be presented orally or in writing. If written statements are submitted, it is requested that, if possible, thirty (30) copies be provided for the Commission's use. Additional copies may be deposited with the Secretaries at the hearings for the use of the news media and others present.

First Meeting Within Five Days

Police Seek Contract Talks

A letter of intent seeking negotiations for a new contract has been sent to city hall by Victoria police union, president Patrick Braiden of the union disclosed Wednesday.

Braiden said the letter did not contain any specific union proposals for the new contract and declined to divulge what requests would be made on wages or in other fields.

He said one factor in the union's wage proposals would be the Canadian cost-of-living index, which he said had risen 10.8 per cent in the first nine months of this year.

The letter was required as a means of opening negotiations and sources indicated the first meeting between Victoria officials and union representatives was to follow within five days of receipt of the letter.

Present police union contracts in Victoria, Saanich, Esquimalt and Oak Bay expire Dec. 21. Officials of the Saanich Police Association said they expect to send a similar letter to municipal hall before the end of the year.

The practice for most recent contracts has been for the two larger unions to await the outcome of Vancouver police union talks and then seek wage parity with Vancouver, Esquimalt and Oak Bay then would settle for what was won in Victoria and Saanich.

In bargaining for the present contracts, however,

Saanich police came out with lower 1973 wages than their counterparts in Victoria. Saanich officials indicated their 1974 goal would be a return to parity with Victoria.

Armed Guardsmen At Prison Parley

HONOLULU (AP) — Fifty armed members of the U.S. National Guard stood by Wednesday after an inconclusive meeting between prison officials and a representative of rebellious prisoners holding the main cell-block.

An undetermined number of prisoners took control of the 200-man block early Wednesday. After a bout with tear gas, the inmates asked for the meeting with prison officials, but the officials said nothing was settled during the meeting.

Abuse Prevention

UIC Boosts Safeguards

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Unemployment Insurance Commission will expand its newly-developed personal approach program to include personal interviews designed to prevent abuses of the jobless benefit system before they occur, Manpower Minister Robert Andras said Wednesday.

Andras said at a news conference that, during the interviews, claimants will be given an outline of their obligations as well as their rights under the system.

He estimated that between 50 and 60 per cent of new claimants would be given personal interviews.

Among the categories of claimant scheduled to be given personal interviews are persons who voluntarily quit their jobs, persons transferring from maternity or sick benefits to regular benefits, those who have transferred their claims from one section of the country to another and persons whose skills are in high demand where they live.

Andras last April announced the new system under which the UIC increased a number of its offices and introduced what it called the "service unit concept" — small groups of trained personnel to handle all aspects of a claim. He described the old system as "mail order house" approach under which claimants had little or no opportunity to deal directly with UIC personnel.

Guy Cousineau, UIC chairman, said that since April, UIC personnel has concentrated on explaining rights to claimants and helping to process applications.

Andras said the expanded interview system represents "a preventive approach to misuse of the UIC program rather than what we have been doing in the past, which was a more reactive approach."

"Our administration simply was not geared to do this before. Now it is geared to do it," he said.

Ex-Victorians' Pet

Friendly Moose Shot by Hunter

COCHRANE, Alta. (CP) — Police continued their search Wednesday for a hunter who shot a tame moose on a wildlife reserve near here on the weekend.

The moose, named Peterkin, was a pet of former Victorians Miles and Beryl Smeeton, owners of the 160-acre Wildlife Reserve of Western Canada, 14 miles northwest of this foothills town.

An Alberta fish and wildlife spokesman said Wednesday the hunter apparently walked from his car to the fence surrounding the reserve and shot the tame animal. The fence was clearly marked with "no shooting" signs.

"Peterkin was so tame he would permit people to walk up and pet his nose," the spokesman said. "It would have been easy to shoot him."

The Smeetons said Peterkin and his mate Petruska had raised three calves, two of them still living on the reserve. Both animals were given to the reserve by the Calgary zoo three years ago.

"I have written a book based on their life called Moose Madness, but now the central character has been killed," Smeeton said.

Aside from the tame moose, the Smeetons care for an elk, two Arctic owls and four northern kit foxes. They plan to include representatives of other animals of Alberta threatened with extinction.

Pet's Favorite Boogie Band

Crowbar Wields Heavy Rock

CANADIAN ROCK group Crowbar relax in bus complete with sound system, bar and television. From left: organist Joey Chirowski; lead guitarist John (Ghetto) Gibbard; Rheel Lanthier; Kelly Jay; Roly Greenway; and drummer Sonnie Bernardi.

By MICHAEL BENNETT
Canadian Press Correspondent

After a while all hotel rooms look the same. You could swear that the waitress handing you the menu in Saskatoon was in Calgary the day before.

But even for an outsider, the glamor soon wears thin.

And for a rock 'n' roll musician on the road, it's relentless, grinding work.

Crowbar, six talented crazies who form Prime Minister Trudeau's favorite boogie band, have appeared in more towns on more nights during the last two years than they can remember.

Their cross-Canada expedition began in Nanaimo, in a refurbished 1956 bus, christened Bad Manors II, which never made it to Lethbridge.

Its transmission gave out near Nanton, Alta., and Carl, a commercial artist turned chauffeur-mechanic, shepherded it back to Calgary in fourth gear.

THE group-Kelly Jay, who can pick up his piano as easily as he plays it; guitarists John Ghetto Gibbard and Rheel Lanthier, organist Joseph Chirowski, drummer Sonnie Bernardi and bassist Roly Greenway—plus Jewels Orange, Crowbar's social director from Los Angeles, road manager Bob Roper and a visiting reporter, arrived in the back of a flagged-down panel truck.

When Roper appeared and yelled: "You're on!" they bounced onto the stage as a fire siren screamed in the background.

A couple of songs later, Kelly went into his national rap against a funky piano background.

"You know," he croaked,

"people in Toronto and Vancouver keep asking us and Lighthouse: 'How can you play places like Red Deer, Nanaimo and Lethbridge?'"

"Well, it's because of people like you. You can pay easy bread ($2.25) and we can make twice as much playing here as we can in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania."

The kids almost blew him off the stage screaming "RIGHT ON!"

Saskatoon was a nice place to visit but, for Crowbar, a disaster.

Trucker fell asleep at the wheel and the equipment truck flopped over in a ditch. The instruments and amps were damaged.

The music wasn't the best 30 minutes the band had done and when it was over the dressing room door was locked for nearly an hour.

Muffled curses echoed through the passageway. Regina was the magical gig the band needed after Saskatoon.

The manager of the centre for the performing arts was convinced he was out of his mind to bring a boogie band to the house of...Beethoven, Brahms and Berlioz.

The show was a sellout for the crystal and glass cultural shrine.

"We stuffed it down his throat," said Roper afterward.

"When he came back to the dressing room and said: 'Hey, it's nice to have you here, I didn't think you were going to do it,' I felt like laying the cat out cold."

The magic would come and go through Brandon and Winnipeg, onto familiar ground in Ontario and finally out to the East Coast. There would be more wild adulation, drunken hostility, low riders, high rollers, groupies, sleepless nights and hangover mornings.

Phone Union Picks Squire

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Federation of Telephone Workers of British Columbia has chosen John Squire of the Retail and Wholesale Department Store Union as its representative on the three-member industrial inquiry into the Okanagan Telephone strike.

The union announced their selection Tuesday after the company agreed to drop the threat of legal action in connection with last week's picketing of B.C. Telephone's Abbotsford offices in defiance of a court injunction.

Okanagan Telephone, which has been struck by 550 employees since July 25, is a wholly-owned subsidiary of B.C. Telephone.

The company's choice for the inquiry is Vancouver lawyer Allan McEachern.

The two sides have been unable to agree on a mutually acceptable chairman, and Labor Minister Bill King is expected to make the appointment within the next few days.

ROME (CP) — Canada, as expected, has put the interests of its farmers ahead of concerns for a world food stockpiling program proposed as buffer against starvation in future lean years.

Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan told a United Nations agency conference Wednesday that Canada is prepared to "move in the direction" of a world food security system.

But he indicated that the country's support will depend upon arrangements to prevent international food reserves from dampening prices for farm goods.

"A storage program is desirable, indeed it is a necessary feature of trying to maintain a world food supply," Whelan told high-ranking representatives from 130 nations at Food and Agriculture Organization talks.

"But to try to arrive at a solution to the problem of world food security solely through a storage program is undesirable and, indeed I venture to say, impossible."

He indicated that Canada will seek instead a broader program, under which farmers would be guaranteed access to certain markets and given long term contracts for their goods.

Canada's attitude reflects that of the United States, put forward Tuesday by U.S. Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz. Both have stressed the need to increase production through price incentives to farmers.

Supply will best meet demand, Whelan said, if farmers are assured of "adequate and reasonable" prices.

He, like Butz, warned that one of the central problems of building up food reserves is one of costs.

"We have found from past experience that some nations are reluctant to share costs for maintaining reserves, let alone the costs of having too large reserves looked upon as surpluses overhanging international markets."

Such surpluses, he said, discourage production because they lower prices.

Whelan added he hopes the three-week meeting will be able to come up with the general philosophy needed to establish a balance between enough production and "socially acceptable" farm incomes.

Canada supported the idea of a "higher order of co-operation" to offset the problem of current food shortage and the need to provide developing countries with the means of increasing their production.

"But Canada also supports the need for action and policies to deal with world surplus conditions that ruin structures and investment, the very basis of a guaranteed growing supply of food around the world," Whelan said.

'Bulldozer Approach' Unacceptable

Ottawa Ends Project Aid

MONTREAL (CP) — Cities will no longer receive federal aid for rebuilding projects that decimate urban cores in the guise of modernization. Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford said Tuesday.

"This bulldozer approach is no longer acceptable," Basford told 450 delegates at the Canadian Conference on Housing Rehabilitation.

The minister told the conference sponsored by the Canadian Council on Social Development: "Municipalities that consider covering 10 acres with blacktop for a handful of merchants and a bank, calling it a shopping centre, won't get any money as long as I'm minister. We're looking for worthwhile projects."

He said provincial governments have not participated in two new improvement programs with a $100 million budget.

He said his department had been told the allotment for the Neighborhood Improvement Program and Residential Rehabilitation Program was "modest, insufficient for needs, yet virtually the whole sum lies unspent as the fiscal year draws to a close."

Basford said he would meet with responsible provincial ministers within the next few weeks to urge them to sign agreements.

Under the programs, the federal government pays half the cost of acquiring and clearing land for low-income housing and for social and recreational facilities.

Toronto Sun Fights UIC

TORONTO (UPI) — The Toronto Sun, a morning newspaper, said Wednesday it would not pay the 40 per cent increase Jan. 1 for unemployment insurance, and had asked its lawyers to study means of challenging the government in the courts.

It said the Trudeau government "chickened out" in allowing a bill on the unemployment insurance commission to die. UIC costs this year would reach $2.5 billion, and "the rip-off continues."

Subsidies Freeze Lifted On Eastern Fishboats

OTTAWA (UPI) — The freeze on subsidies for new fishing vessels on the Atlantic coast has been lifted but new regulations have been implemented to protect over-exploited species, environment Minister Jack Davis announced Wednesday.

Davis told the House of Commons that while the three-month freeze on subsidies which took effect in August had been lifted, the 35 per cent subsidies would no longer be given for vessels involved in fishing lobster, scallop, salmon, herring and snow crab.

He said the emphasis would be on modernization of the present fleet through replacement and conversion of vessels and encouragement of greater efforts in areas where fish were plentiful.

Fishermen and fishing companies would be encouraged especially to take up Canada's international quotas for cod in northern areas.

The new regulations, effective immediately, affect both registration and licensing of vessels and equipment and crews.

Old-Fashioned Christmas Tree

Holiday Stamp in Needlepoint

Colonist-Monitor Service

Usually artists paint stamp designs. But not always. The science stamp of 1963 was a wood engraving, as was 1971's San Juan stamp. And last year's Olympic designs were collages.

This year the U.S. Postal Service offers a holiday stamp done in needlepoint. This has never been done before, although the 1964 commemorative homemaker's stamp simulated the needlework of an early American sampler.

The design for the 1973 needlepoint stamp, done by Dollie Tingle, is of a whimsical, old-fashioned Christmas tree.

It is postal service policy to issue two holiday stamps per year. The second one was in the National Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C., by Bradbury Thompson.

New stamp

Raphael's painting is called "the Small Cowper Madonna, because its first recorded owner (in 1780) was Lord Cowper, British ambassador to the Court of Tuscany. Lord Cowper owned a larger Raphael Madonna also, hence the "small" in the title.

It was painted in Florence about 1505, when the artist was in his early 20's. It is on wood and measures 23 1/2 inches in height and 17 1/2 inches in width. Art critics see evidences of the influence of both Michelangelo and Leonardo da Vinci in the painting.

The two eight-cent Christmas stamps will be issued Nov. 7 in Washington, D.C., with ceremonies at the National Gallery of Art.

The print order is for one billion of each stamp.

The vertical, commemorative-size stamps will be printed on the Andreotti gravure press in six colors. Yellow, light brown, red, blue, black, and green inks will be used for the Raphael stamp; light brown, yellow, gold, red, blue, and black inks will print the needlepoint Christmas tree. Each stamp will have six plate numbers.

Panasonic presents a see-through clock radio for your penthouse.

And a Take'n Tape for the kids' treehouse.

Wherever you live. And wherever you're going. Panasonic keeps coming up with sound ideas.

Take the Clear Dial (model RC-6500C). Nobody else makes anything quite like it. The unique design of the illuminated dials makes the station indicator and hands of the clock look like they're floating in mid-air. It will awaken you to music or a cheery "chirp." A nice way to start your day. And with FM and AM, too, you can keep it that way.

Our Crazy Color Take'n Tape (RQ-711S) might have been made for a treehouse. It swings from AC current to batteries, party music-maker to cassette recorder. And its ultra-sensitive built-in mike picks up sound from any direction.

A perfect combination of beauty and performance. That's how we describe The Ridgefield (RE-6513C). An FM/AM table radio with easy to read slide-rule tuning. One look and need we say more?

For serious clock-watchers and good listening. The Ashburn (RC-6253C) is the automatic choice. Its contoured styling covers up a maze of circuitry that brings both FM and AM to your ears. A music or buzz alarm. And a full-feature 24-hour digital clock among a host of other ingenious ideas. All wrapped up in an attractive walnut or metallic silver finished cabinet. Or you can buy The Atwood (RC-1103C). A colorful and compact AM digital clock radio.

Adventurous types and sleepyheads are equally at home with The Altadena (RQ-432S). A lightweight cassette recorder and FM/AM radio with an Auto-Sleep switch. Very portable and very practical because it can be set to shut itself off completely if you think the music might lull you into the land of dreams. And it works 3 ways. At home, on batteries and with an optional car/boat adaptor.

Just as adaptable is The Abingdon (RQ-309S). For a truly portable cassette recorder with built-in condenser mike, its lightness and shape make a lot of sense.

Panasonic has a host of good things going for you. Your dealer can show you a lot more than we can here. And a most presentable lot it is, too.

New Move

Strike Notice Dropped At GM

DETROIT (UPI) — The United Auto Workers Wednesday cancelled its national strike deadline at General Motors Corp. next Monday, but said there will be a number of local "mini-strikes" while negotiations continue on a national contract.

The union's announcement came hours after it declared its new contract with Ford Motor Co. ratified despite rejection of the pact by skilled tradesmen, a small minority of the total Ford work force. The skilled workers claimed veto power under the UAW constitution.

UAW president Leonard Woodcock said the strike deadline for 420,000 GM workers was called off to "remove the temptation" from GM's mind that it could bankrupt the union during a strike. The union's strike fund stands at $71 million, just over half the 1970 level when the UAW struck GM for 67 days.

Woodcock said the union strategy would be to let its old contract, extended since Sept. 14 on a day-to-day basis, expire Monday. This will allow local unions to "pursue their own course" and possibly strike over local issues.

Woodcock would not predict how many local strikes there would be Monday but said the union would have enough control over its members to get them back on the job after a few days and avoid a nationwide shutdown.

He said this course of action had nothing to do with the trouble the union has had in gaining full acceptance of the Ford agreement by the membership. He said he hoped to avoid a strike that would harm the nation's economy.

Union Split 'Forced'

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadian members of the International Union of United Brewery Workers of America have disaffiliated themselves from the union in reaction to the union's amalgamation with the Teamsters Union.

The disaffiliation came Tuesday when representatives of the 12,000 Canadian members said they saw the fusing of their union with the Teamsters as an abandonment by the international union.

The Brewery Workers-Teamsters amalgamation came in Cincinnati last week. Claude Thomson, legal adviser of the Canadian section of the brewery workers union, said the move here was not a bid by the Canadians "to turn their back on the international union."

Rather, he said, the Canadians "find themselves in a situation which forces them to survive independently rather than to submit to the authority of the Teamsters Union."

The Canadian membership, in an earlier meeting in Toronto, has already set up the structure for an independent union.

A meeting is planned for Winnipeg in January to ratify a constitution and elect permanent officers.

1,340 Cars Recalled

TORONTO (CP) — Volkswagen Canada Ltd. is recalling about 1,340 Audi Foxes to check the bolts holding the rear wheel backing plates and replace them if necessary.

The company said the cars involved, manufactured between February and July of 1973, might have received damage to the bolts during loading aboard ship in Germany.

Twenty Hot-Foot for School District Seats

By DON GAIN
Colonist Reporter

Twenty candidates are running for 10 seats in the school districts of Greater Victoria, Saanich and Sooke. Eight of the candidates are incumbents.

Running for the Greater Victoria board are:

Peter Bunn, 888 Linkleas, general contractor. Bunn, board chairman, has been on the board 12 years, longer than any other trustee. A paramount concern for him is identification and removal of incompetent teachers for the sake of the child, the teaching profession and the taxpayer.

He would also like to investigate "many complaints that discipline in schools is non-existent and that kids do just as they like."

Ray Ferris, 4124 Longview, supervisor of community development in the capital region for the human resources department. Parents should be encouraged to plan for their children's educational needs, he says, and they should be consulted in the evaluation of teachers and principals. Parents' help should be enlisted in teaching children with learning disabilities.

Harry Graham, 633 Radcliffe Lane, retired professional engineer. Graham, running for his second term, is in favor of community schools as a means of making maximum use of facilities. He would like to see more aid for children with learning disabilities and physical handicaps. Sundance and Sentinel schools are very desirable experiments, he says, to keep abreast of the new thought in educational circles and for evaluation of their alternate methods.

He favors facilities in elementary schools for physical training, but is against innovations that impair basic skills of reading, writing and computation.

Harold Knight, 4190 Gleneden Road, management consultant. Chairman of the finance and legal committee of the board and chairman of Camosun College council, Knight wants good value for the educational dollar through financial reform of the school board budget, improved communication and co-operation within the district and with other educational groups, provincial government, Camosun College and University of Victoria. He also wants greater public participation and decision making in education.

Phillip Perry, 1151 Palmer, is director of counselling and schooling programs for delinquent youths at the youth attendance centre. Perry wants facilities in the schools for the early detection of learning difficulties in children and for the teaching of life skills. Full use must be made of community skill to broaden the experiences of the child, he says, and parent-teacher associations must be revitalized with schools becoming centres for community development and personal growth. As a certified teacher working outside the public school system, he says he has a unique insight into shortcomings of the school system.

Daphne Temple, 1243 Richardson, widow. Mrs. Temple, running for her third term, is in favor of giving student councils a more meaningful role in schools. Parents must take more interest in schools, she says, and communication would be improved by having a parent advocate or ombudsman whom parents could approach with queries and problems. She would like to see labor taking a more active role in helping students find out about trades they could follow.

Running for the Sooke board, Milne's Landing area, are:

Pauline Chamberlain, 2948 Sooke Road, housewife. Mrs. Chamberlain would like to see more women on the school board and would like them to be mothers of children in school. She would also like to see more liaison between the board and teachers.

Ronald Fitton, 6470 Sooke Road, television technician. Fitton, running for his third term, says he is in favor of an overall plan to increase libraries in schools and to develop schools for community use. He would like to see smaller classes at the elementary level to aid diagnosis of learning disabilities in class. He was chairman of the ad hoc committee for the building program, chairman of the Vancouver Island regional library board.

Ernest Knott, 4810 Sooke, woodworker. Knott accuses the board of bad planning and poor management of finances. He is against construction of a proposed new junior high school in the Millstream area, preferring instead a new school in the rapidly growing Metchosin, Glen Lake, Happy Valley area. He supports removal of school taxes from homes and land and promises to work to see that the provincial government's pre-election promise is made good — namely that natural resources pay the cost of education.

Mary Larsen, East Sooke Road, housewife. Mrs. Larsen is interested in children with learning disabilities and would like to see them helped in earlier grades. She believes parents should be more involved in schools and should discuss problems with the teachers.

W. J. Stephenson, 6675 Goodmere, saw-filer. Stephenson has been a school trustee for five years and wants to put to use the experience and knowledge gained in this position. He says there has been a steady growth of buildings and renovations as needed and these improvements have been a direct result of interested and active board members. He has always tried to return every call from parents and concerned citizens, he says.

Running for the Sooke board, Belmont area, are:

Fred Boulter, 808 Brock, shipwright. Boulter was a trustee for almost six years when he resigned in 1965 because of what he calls the "harassment from aldermen and mayors in the province who made school boards whipping boys for the cost of education. He wants to look into vocational school programs and would like to see them designed in co-operation with the department of labor.

Noel Haas, 4339 Happy Valley Road, kennel operator. Mrs. Haas says she was prompted to run by "shock and disappointment" at the joining of Elizabeth Fisher junior high and Belmont high schools with a total of almost 1,700 students.

"People as individual human beings are becoming more and more gobbled up in this age of mass-everything. Consequently, it is essential we let our children during their years of development, feel important as individuals."

Keith Jackson, 605 Donovan, Colwood fireman. Jackson says he feels parents in the district need someone they can identify with on the board, someone their own age, with children in the system. "I also feel there is a definite need for better teacher-parent relations. There is a definite lack of communication between the school and the home," he says.

Brian Killip, 3351 Betula Place, economist teaching at Camosun College. Killip criticizes the planning that has allowed inaction on construction of a new junior high school and says the taxpayer will be faced with increased taxes, because of inflation, when the school is built. The students suffer from large class sizes, he says, and there are deficiencies in facilities at junior high and elementary levels.

Shirley Wilde, 3758 Duke Road, realtor. Mrs. Wilde, the mother of two school children, says more and smaller schools are needed. They can be built by not purchasing any more land, by, instead, using present parks and crown land, and by having sales tax removed from building materials for schools. "We now provide loans to foreign countries and give outright grants to special groups. So let's bring a few benefits back to the community," she says.

Running for Saanich board against incumbent trustee Jack Armstrong is Charles Doyle. Competing for the Central Saanich seat on the board are incumbent trustee Ann Foerster and Ted Clayards, former Central Saanich alderman.

Jack Armstrong, 4333 Northridge, securities salesman. Armstrong says he believes in lay school boards. "We have professionals operating our schools," he says, "and they should not be dominant on school boards. Our representation should be of a wide section of our society." He believes in reasonable structure and in discipline. He has been on the board for six years and was chairman in 1971 and 1972.

Charles Doyle, 759 Helvetia Crescent, associate professor of English at University of Victoria. Doyle believes that education at all levels can be sound and solid and yet progressive. More could be done for the special problems of both bright children and slow learners, he says. English courses could be more demanding but need not be less imaginative. He believes in discipline but not in corporal punishment and would like to see a pool of specialists in such areas as community services.

Ted Clayards, 1217 Mount Newton Crossroad, civilian personnel administrator and training officer for defence department civilians. Clayards says his main approach is that more judicious and careful management is necessary. He accuses the school board of "mismanaging communication between itself and the electorate by failure to keep the public posted on likely significant increases in the forthcoming budget." He claims there "appears to be the shadow of a major referendum hanging over us. I consider it unfair that the board chooses to keep this information to itself until after the elections, thereby giving an advantage to the incumbents."

Ann Foerster, 508 Senanus, housewife. Mrs. Foerster has served two years as a trustee. She has four children who have been or are attending schools in the district. "A trustee, as I see it," she says, "is a person with whom you have placed your school system in trust — your money, your children, indeed the future of our community."

"We are your representatives and are there to ensure that your children receive the best schooling possible to help them become useful happy people."

Autumn

"Season of mists and mellow fruitfulness..."

Autumn is a time of lingering delight as quietness spreads over British Columbia and a glorious range of vibrant color assaults the eye. Golds, yellows, reds stand sharply etched in clearcut outlines against a backdrop of multi-shaded greens or are softly blurred by mist rising from nearby waters.

But for the famous British Columbia salmon, fall marks the beginning of the most strenuous time of their lives, culminating in the frenzied struggle to return to their birthplace and achieve regeneration of their species.

Goldstream Creek, spawning bed for the Chum salmon, is always a popular place here on the Island for spectators hoping for a close view of this recurring drama. Young and old alike are magnetized in fascination by the gallant battle of the fish to overcome all odds and to return to the stream where they first saw life — there, to mate, to spawn and to die.

Whatever your special interest — whether capturing the salmon's dramatic swim on film, hiking through the woods with a crunchy carpet of fallen leaves underfoot, or fall touring through the high-ways and by-ways of British Columbia — you'll find a wealth of advertisements in the Classified pages of your Victoria daily newspaper to cater to your needs.

Fall also signals an end to many "hot weather" hobbies. Sell those items you no longer need. Place your own classified ad... you'll enjoy the fast results.

Racial Assault Not True, Says Sheriff

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — A black woman who told police a gang of black attackers abducted her and her white husband and set him afire made up the story, authorities say.

"All this business about abduction and racial incidents was all fabrication," Sheriff Edward Stack said. And the couple isn't married.

"The only thing she told the truth about was that she drove the victim to the hospital."

Bryan Kempler, 33, was beaten and kicked in the head, bound with electrical cord, doused with liquid and set afire, police said. He was listed in serious condition at a hospital.

Police arrested Johnny Herald, 31, of Fort Lauderdale, on charges of aggravated assault.

Stack said Kempler's girlfriend, Jeradine Barfield, 26, told police a gang of 11 black attackers abducted her and her husband Sunday evening at gunpoint in a racial incident and threatened to kill them.

Taylor
... routine checkup

Blakeney
... offering jobs

SAN DIEGO, Calif. — Actress Elizabeth Taylor entered Scripps Clinic and Research Foundation for a "routine annual physical" at the facility said. James Boyland was unable to say how long Miss Taylor, 41, would remain for the physical, but he said the full battery of tests usually took up to "a week and a half."

REGINA — Premier Allan Blakeney invited out-of-work people from across the country to come to Saskatchewan, where "there are good jobs going begging. To people in other parts of Canada where the unemployment rate is much higher, I would suggest you seriously consider coming to Saskatchewan where there are good jobs, good working conditions, a booming housing industry and relatively inexpensive housing." The province had only 1.9-per-cent unemployed last month, the lowest rate in Canada.

BONN — President Gustav Heinemann, 74, announced he would not run for a second five-year term. In a nationwide radio and television speech, Heinemann said he would step down as West Germany's third postwar president June 30, 1974.

VANCOUVER — A 70-year-old Vancouver man, Theodore Lapierre, says he has invented a revolutionary internal combustion engine weighing just 25 pounds and producing up to 150 horsepower. Lapierre describes the engine as orbital — the piston continually rotates. He says his invention, which he says he has been working on for 50 years, will run on gasoline or diesel fuel or a mixture of the two. He says the engine will get 40 to 45 miles a gallon.

CHICAGO — Gary Cohen, 14, was found dead in his home, the third member of his family to be the victim of his late father's gun collection in less than five months. Police said the youth was found in the family's basement apartment, killed by a 12-gauge shotgun in what police said appeared to be suicide. Police said the boy was despondent over the death of his father Philip Cohen, a city filtration engineer, who took his own life last Friday, and a shooting incident which left his sister Jane, 15, in hospital and paralysed from the neck down, June 19.

WASHINGTON — Ted Kennedy, 12, son of Senator and Mrs. Ted Kennedy (D-Mass.), was admitted to Georgetown University Hospital for tests for an undisclosed ailment.

SkyLab Countdown

Ready for Space In Flawed Ship

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI) — The countdown sailed along smoothly Wednesday for firing the Skylab 3 crew into orbit Friday morning atop a booster rocket officials know is flawed but still think is capable of an adequate performance.

Problems with the Saturn 1B booster forced two previous delays in the launch, originally set for last Saturday. Inspectors first discovered cracks in the rocket's tail fins, and later found more cracks in some vertical beams of the 22-storey rocket. The tail fins were replaced, but the beams were not.

Kennedy Space Centre launch director Walter Kapryan said other manned spacecraft — including Apollo 10 — have been launched with known defects in the boosting rocket, but only after it was determined there was no danger.

"We have flown with some components that were defective," he said in an interview. "But we've always made an analysis that gave us no (concern) for the safety of the flight or for the safety of the mission."

Kapryan said analysis of the cracks in the vertical beams showed that "we have more than an adequate safety margin for flight."

The tops of fuel tanks on the Apollo 10 launch rocket had buckled before blastoff, the official said, but the booster still did its work of thrusting the crew into Earth orbit, where the astronauts ran a successful test of the lunar module, later used for moon landings.

Despite the recent troubles with the rocket, the Skylab 3 crew — Gerald Carr, Edward Gibson and William Pogue — appeared relaxed and confident.

M.V. Chesnut's Garden Notes

Those folks who put in a lawn last September will be wondering whether to cut the developing grass. Thanks to the weather and a fair amount of moisture, germination was good and the little grass seedlings have grown apace.

In my opinion, it would be most harmful to allow the growth to continue unchecked. Not only does long grass tend to mat down in winter, choking and suffocating itself, but to allow it to go uncut delays a process known as tillering.

This is the development of side shoots from low down on the grass plant, most necessary for a good lawn, and the process is stimulated by cutting, just as a houseplant geranium will branch out if you nip off its growing tip.

For first choice, if the grass is not TOO long, would be a self-propelled reel-type mower, in first-class condition and razor sharp, for young grass is so easily pulled out by the roots when the mower is dull.

A rotary power mower will do a good job, but sharpen the blade first. Set the mower to cut one inch high, and don't tackle the job in frosty weather, for grass shouldn't be walked on during frost.

I don't keep any formal garden diary, but for some years now I have been watching and noting just which plants keep on blooming after most of the garden has packed it in for the winter.

I don't mean just the odd individual bloom such as you find with Calendula and snapdragons, but the kinds which can be counted on to make a worthwhile display very late in the year.

In addition to the traditional autumn plants like the chrysanthemums and the Michaelmas daisies, there are a surprising number of late bloomers going strong.

Probably the best are three heathers — Calluna vulgaris H.E. Beale, pink with long spikes and a carpeting habit; Calluna vulgaris hibernica, single pink and with a similar habit of growth; and C.V. Searle, an exceptionally fine white heather.

You don't often see a Dianthus blooming so late in the year, but we have a small patch of one called Mrs. Clarke which makes a brilliant splash of vivid cherry red well into November.

Good luck rather than good management was responsible for our planting them alongside the vivid blue of Gentian sino-ornata, also blooming its head off.

This gentian must have taken a fancy to our soil and aspect, for we haven't had the slightest trouble with it although it is a notoriously milky plant in many gardens.

We boast to our friends and relatives in the less favored parts of Canada about our roses blooming in December, but to be honest about it, what we get is just the odd weather-beaten bloom here and there — seldom any kind of a real splash.

In our garden, the best of the lot for late bloom is a 40-year-old hybrid tea called Hector Deane — for my money, a better rose by far than a lot of our modern introductions.

The color of the blooms is interesting — a coral red flushed and striped with orange, with long, pointed buds and a pronounced fragrance. The blooms do not "ball" even in the most atrocious weather, and it performs year after year with unflinching good nature.

WASHINGTON — The fieldish scheme of the Arab countries to deprive America of its desperately needed oil had a drastic effect on the nation's culture and economy.

By the spring of 1974, the government had no choice but to invoke a complete ban on private automobiles.

The cultural shock to the country — long described as "a nation on wheels" — was staggering. Indeed, a few less stable members of the society failed to survive.

"What I can't stand," screamed a distraught housewife, being dragged across New York's deserted Fifth Avenue to an ambulance by sympathetic attendants, "is this deafening silence!"

And in Los Angeles, the mind of 94-year-old Elbert Quimby snapped when the life-long resident of the downtown area looked out his window one morning and for the first time clearly saw the city hall 14 blocks away.

But despite the absence of horns, shrieking tires, roaring engines and gas fumes, most Americans managed somehow to make do.

In fact in some families the ban created occasional flashes of elation. "Imagine, our son, Irvin, has learned to time clearly saw the city hall 14 blocks away."

But despite the absence of horns, shrieking tires, roaring engines and gas fumes, most Americans managed somehow to make do.

In fact in some families the ban created occasional flashes of elation. "Imagine, our son, Irvin, has learned to walk!" a proud Mrs. Wilbur Wasp told her bridge club. "And he's only 18."

It is instructive to compare two men: the self-centred neurotic, whose anxious interests are focussed primarily upon himself, and the emotionally-robust, morally-healthy man who is fully involved in the world.

It would be a mistake to believe that the former is unhappy while the latter enjoys life. The opposite may often be the case. And thereby hangs a tale with a built-in lesson.

The emotionally-sound individual is rarely happy in the superficial, mindless ways some people tend to identify joy with carelessness. Indeed, he is often "a" man of sorrows.

Because he is a profound, deeply-feeling person, he is much more alert to and aware of life than self-centred, anxiously neurotic men can be. This is why he feels more, receives more—and also why he aches and pains more.

The egotist, concerned principally with his own hungers is easily fulfilled when his own needs are sated. Not so for him who ventures forth into the world caring about life and other men's lives. He will never be fully satisfied.

But this is the self-same pain that the world requires for its growth and creativity. Without this kind of pain "for the world"—"weltschmerz," as it is called—there could be neither birth nor maturity.

The self-centred man may also suffer pains; he often lives in morbid fears of his own sickness or death.

But worldly men, because they have become accusand not only within himself, he is simply more alive.

He is more engaged and involved with living. His emotional experience is larger, more mature—and thus, he has been schooled to grapple with the realities of life. If things are tough, he's ready for them, for he's been toughened up already.

Ironically, it is the self-concerned man who ends up frightened and lonely, often terribly incapable of simple coping.

The "tragic" men of the world, the involved, emotionally-keen humans who feel the world's pain may never be ecstatically joyous—but their involvements can ultimately bring them deep, human satisfactions.

The first man often dies before he has even lived. The involved, however, live long after they die.

Tablets Incomplete

By DICK WEST
From Washington

A couple of months ago I had turned up an ancient Dead Sea scroll that was similar to the Old Testament account of the origin of the Ten Commandments.

The scroll related how a great leader and prophet whose name may be rendered in English as Mozus, or Mozis, had conferred on a mountaintop with an adviser believed to have been God.

The messages that Mozus, or Mozis, received were transcribed on two stone tablets. But he refused to reveal the contents, citing executive privilege.

At the time I first heard of the scroll, not enough had been translated to make clear what happened to the tablets. But now the work has progressed to the point where more information is available.

The scroll indicates that Mozus, or Mozis, became embroiled in a dispute with tribal elders who were demanding that he turn over the tablets to them.

The elders insisted they had a right to know what God had told Mozus, or Mozis, with respect to other gods, graven images, "using the Lord's name in vain, remembering the sabbath, honoring parents, killing, adultery, stealing, bearing false witness and coveting a neighbor's wife."

Mozus, or Mozis, his patience sorely tried, finally agreed to give the elders a summary of the tablets. He proclaimed his offer a reasonable compromise, but some of the elders were dissatisfied and refused to do his bidding. Whereupon they were banished into the wilderness. And great was the hue and cry thereafter.

When scribes, some of whom may have been prejudiced against Mozus, or Mozis, revealed these events unto the people, the people became incensed and threatened to overthrow their leader.

Thereupon, the leader, seeing the handwriting on the wall ("Impeach Mozus, or Mozis"), yielded forth the tablets unto the elders.

This portion of the scroll is rather indistinct. The text as pieced together by scholars is so implausible it raises questions of authenticity.

However, the scroll appears to state that when the tablets finally were handed down to the elders, two of the 10 messages supposedly inscribed upon there were not there. Moreover, they were two of the most important messages. Without them, the elders could not learn what God expected of the people with regard to adultery and coveting a neighbor's wife.

Were these activities permissible, or not?

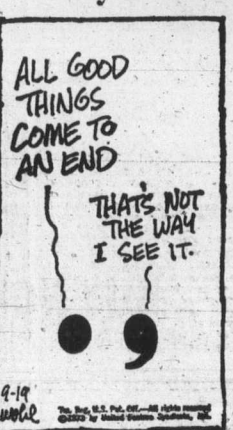

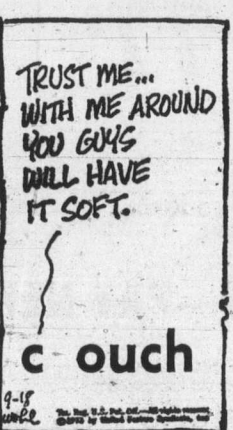

Mozus, or Mozis, denied the tablets had been tampered with. He explained that the missing messages had never been inscribed in the first place. There was some sort of technical problem with "the moving finger of God" which wrote upon the tablets.

The rest of the scroll still awaits translation.

A year or so ago, Rhode Island Democratic Senator John Pastore and his U.S. Senate communications subcommittee held some widely-publicized hearings on television violence.

The U.S. networks cut down on unnecessary violence but only by declining to renew O'Hara, smoothing down the Gunsmoke opening and such. The 1972-73 season didn't cause many complaints but this fall, violence has returned with a vengeance.

Pastore therefore has announced new TV-violence hearings will be held in the spring. Undoubtedly, the networks will cut a few tokens heads again, there'll be another relatively quiet year and I'll be writing this same item again in about two years.

Wonder if Pastore will last that long.

BUREAU OF USELESS INFORMATION: Wednesday's answer — Katharine Hepburn co-starred in Bringing Up Baby with Cary Grant, in The Lion in Winter with Laurence Olivier, in The Rainmaker with Burt Lancaster and in Summer of '42 with Rossano Brazzi. And she outacted all but Grant.

Today's question — Elizabeth Taylor won't be co-starring with Richard Burton any more and had some other co-stars in the past. Name her leading man in Elephant Walk, Cat on a Hot Tin Roof, Giant, Ivanhoe and A Place in the Sun. All the answers appear Friday.

Thursday Movies

C-9:30 a.m. — Esther and the King (1960 Biblical epic), Joan Collins. I get nasty letters with say any Biblical epic is pretty bad but this is pretty bad except for the Collins cleavage.

C-12:45 noon — Female Trap (1968 nasty-family thriller, surprisingly good), Jack Lord, Susan Strasberg, Tisha Sterling, Colin Wilcox and a fine performance by the late T. C. Jones as the family head — 6, 8.

1:30 p.m. — Elmer the Great (1933 Joe E. Brown, still occasionally amusing). A long time since a Joe E. flick has made the local scene — 13.

3:30 — Diary of Anne Frank (fairly good 1959 war tragedy, part two), Joseph Schildkraut, Millie Perkins, Shelley Winters.

C-3:30 — Banning (fairly bad 1967 corrupt tennis pros), Robert Wagner, James Farentino, Jill St. John. Love-45-7.

C-8:00 — The Glenn Miller Story (1954 biographical disgrace), James Stewart, Joan Allison, many other victims. The music is all right in spots but the story is simply not true, just soap — 13.

C-10:00 — Cincinnati Kid (fairish 1966 poker-hustler adventure), Steve McQueen, Edward G. Robinson, Ann-Margret — 12.

11:00 — The Exile (terrible 1948 costume-adventure trash), Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., as Charles II, falls for farmgirl Maria Montez; ugh — 11.

C-11:30 — Don't Make Waves (silly 1967 reomanticized sinker), Tony Curtis, Claudia Cardinale. Wave it goodbye — 7.

11:50 — Pearl of Death (1944). More Sherlock Holmes chukles from Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce, who should have lived forever — 2.

12:00 — The Finest Hours (Winston Churchill documentary). One of the better efforts of its kind — 6, 8.

12:00 — Nobody Lives Forever (low-camp 1946 nasties), John Garfield, many more familiar faces. I'd like to live long enough to see the B.C. Lions win the Grey Cup, or forever, whichever is shorter — 13.

12:05 a.m. — The Hustler (smashing 1961 life is a game of pool), Paul Newman, George Scott, Piper Laurie, Jackie Gleason. Nearly perfect — 12.

C-2:20 — Valley of Mystery (routine 1967 plane-down stuff), Peter Graves. Nearly perfect — 6, 8.

Thursday Radio

8:00 p.m. — Themes and Variations is all John Weinzwig — CBU (600).

8:00 — Edna repeats the Swiss March Biography a Game with Douglas Rain, Mavor Moore — CBU-FM (105.7).

Ancient Rome Trashy

ROME (UPI) — Archeologists digging through the mud of an old sewer under the Colosseum said they have come up with a unique collection of ancient Roman trash. It ranged from peachstones thrown away by spectators to a bear's skull, neatly severed by a gladiator's sword. There were animal bones from carcasses fed to caged lions, and a cameo brooch apparently lost by a woman spectator. "The study of the material we found in the sediment is particularly important," archeologist Claudio Mocchegiani Carpano told newsmen. "Apart from being unique, because there is no documented evidence of excavations of this kind, it provides for the first time certain archeological evidence about the life of the Colosseum up to the second half of the fourth century A.D." Mocchegiani said the objects were found under a six-foot layer of mud in one of four sewage mains under the Colosseum, built in the 1st Century A.D. under the Emperor Vespasian and blocked by a cave-in or earthquake 300 years later.

Yoko Off On Tour To Defy Critics

Colonist Newsday
NEW YORK — She is — the late Bruce Lee aside — the most famous oriental entertainer in the western hemisphere, half of the most notorious show-biz couple to come along since the Burtons, and possibly the most vilified woman since Eve, or at least Eva Braun. She's about to defy the critics, and some of the fans, by going on tour with an authentic rock band.

Yoko Ono's first American tour, her first long-term engagement as a musician without famous ex-Beatle-husband John Lennon, began a week ago at Kennedy's Castaways, in Manhattan. It must have come as a surprise to some of the patrons, who had probably come as much to gawk as to listen, that she no longer catervauls, no longer screeches. She sings.

Middle-Class

Yoko prepared for her tour by rehearsing for a week with the Plastic Ono Superband in a dingy, fluorescent-lit rehearsal studio on the west side of Manhattan, near the port authority terminal.

Even though she was dressed in a conservative sweater-and-slacks outfit that would not seem inappropriate on a secretary or a middle-class student, Yoko was emphatic about one thing: This is her band, playing her music.

"I produced, arranged and wrote the music and lyrics for every song on this album (her recent Feelin' The Space). If Ringo Starr did that, people would certainly talk about it. But all that I see written is, 'well, it's a pretty good record,'" she said.

Removed Sting

It was the only time during the three days I spent with her that she seemed bitter, or hostile. She immediately removed part of the sting, laughing, adding: "Well, I guess I shouldn't complain. They weren't even willing to admit that, before."

There were undercurrents even within her rehearsal, however. The all-male band is fond of the kind of humor that causes inexperienced high-school teachers to blush. Yoko handled it well, playfully punching the musicians when the teasing got out of hand, but sometimes, though she sang with her back to all observers save the group, you could feel her flushing as she quickly changed the subject.

She's shy

At lunch one afternoon, it was suggested to David Spinozza, the talented young guitarist who helped her pick the musicians in the group, that people might listen to Yoko's records for pleasure. "no, they don't," he said, "bewildered that anyone might even suggest such a thing."

Yoko handled that coolly. "I don't even know what entertainment is. It's probably better to entertain than to bore, I guess. I don't know," she said, smiling shyly. She is shy; when you interview her, she smokes nervously and incessantly, one after another, with reckless disregard for her throat.

The next day, when Spinozza's reaction was brought up again, she replied, "Oh, we all know it's a joke. These are very busy session musicians. They could all make more money elsewhere, so they must respect what I'm doing."

Economic Council Warns:

Social Services Fanning Inflation

● Grocery prices down; living cost still up. Page 41.

OTTAWA (UPI) — Government payments to individuals, from welfare to old age pensions, are growing at nearly twice the sustainable rate and should be curbed, the Economic Council of Canada said Wednesday.

Council chairman Andre Reynaud said the advisory body's analysis of the economy showed this was the one area where government policies were out of line with the economic guidelines proposed by the council last year.

"Transfer payments in the last two years have been growing at nearly 20 per cent a year, and this clearly cannot be sustained," he told a news conference. "We think there must be some room for a reduction in the rate of increase."

He said the increases, running at nearly 20 per cent the past two years compared to the council's recommendation of 10 per cent, would not lead to "an overnight catastrophe" but in the long run would force higher taxes, inflation and cutbacks in other government programs.

Reynaud said the council was not recommending cutbacks in specific programs but was urging that $5 or $6 billion be trimmed from the expected payments of $56 billion over the next three years.

He said the council's function was to call the public's attention to the situation so governments and their constituents would be aware of

AP
Egyptian and Israeli generals agreed in a desert meeting on a prisoner exchange and other issues, with the prisoners to begin going home this morning. The generals sealed the deal by shaking hands and swigging whisky straight from the bottle.

The prisoners were to be flown between Israel and Egypt via Cyprus, a United Nations spokesman said in Cairo. The exchange is expected to take six to eight days.

Israel apparently holds about 30 times as many prisoners as Egypt.

The accord, reached Wednesday in a tent on the road to Cairo, wrapped up five of the six clauses of the United States-sponsored truce agreement signed last Sunday.

The two sides have yet to agree on starting

The two sides have yet to agree on starting talks regarding proposed withdrawal to the ceasefire lines of Oct. 22, the date the first UN call went out to stop shooting.

Other points settled Wednesday, the UN spokesman said in Cairo, were:

● The turning over to UN emergency forces Israeli checkpoints on the road between Cairo and the city of Suez.

● Free flow of relief supplies to the city of Suez, an encircled Egyptian city on the west of the Suez Canal at the southern terminus of the waterway, and evacuation of wounded and civilians from the city.

● Shipments of non-military supplies to Egypt's 3rd Army, encircled on both banks of the canal in the area of the city of Suez.

Ottawa Calms U.S. Oil Fear

CP, UPI

NEW YORK — Trade Minister Alastair Gillespie promised U.S. businessmen Wednesday that Canada will not bow to any Arab pressures to reduce oil products exports to the United States.

And in Ottawa, Energy Minister Donald Macdonald denied Wednesday night U.S. reports that American-owned oil was being urgently delayed in shipment through Canada.

Gillespie's comments underlined Prime Minister Tru-

deau's statement in the Commons Tuesday that "we will not alter our foreign policy or our good relationship with the Americans under any pressure from outside."

"Despite our own energy problems and some not-too-subtle pressures from some of our own foreign suppliers, Canada has continued and will continue to do what we can to help the United States meet its energy needs," Gillespie said in a speech to the U.S. national foreign trade convention in New York.

"To those who would question the capacity of Canada to withstand political pressures from other countries, pressures that would try to influence our foreign policy or how we choose our friends, let there be no doubt about Canada's determination to continue to supply her traditional trading partners and friends," Gillespie said.

"Canada does not, and will not, hold her friendships up for ransom."

The minister also stressed, however, that the government will ensure domestic oil needs are met before exporting surpluses to the U.S.

Referring in particular to reports from Detroit and Buffalo that shipments were being held up in Canada, Macdonald said in Ottawa:

"There are no known cases of any undue delay in such shipments."

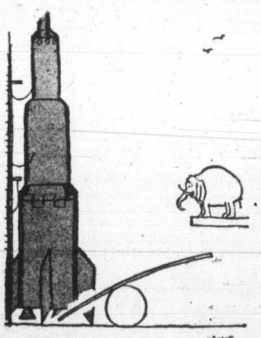

However, he stressed the distinction between authorized exports or transshipments of U.S.-owned oil and the demands filed each month by prospective U.S. customers for shipments of Canadian oil products.

He said it was "long-standing Canadian policy" that the National Energy Board only permits exports of oil which it

Skylab 3 Launch No Energy Saver

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — The launch of three skylab 3 astronauts on Friday will consume great gulps of energy at a time when the rest of the United States is desperately trying to conserve it. (See also Page 5B.)

The Saturn 1B rocket will require 41,500 gallons of a kerosene-type fuel known as RP1, and the second stage will burn 64,000 gallons of liquid hydrogen to boost the craft into orbit.

Mission Control at the Johnson Space Centre near here will operate around the clock throughout the 85-day mission, using more than 2,000 kilowatt hours of power each hour.

U.S. Customers Upset By B.C. Gas Increase

Major U.S. importers of B.C. natural gas expressed shock and dismay Wednesday over announcement of increases in the wholesale and export price of the gas.

Their reaction came as two agreements were filed with the National Energy Board in Ottawa, raising the wholesale price of natural gas within B.C. to 58 cents a thousand cubic feet from 32 cents.

One agreement is between Westcoast Transmission Ltd., the primary natural gas carrier

in the province, and B.C. Petroleum Corp., an agency set up by B.C. legislation proclaimed last week.

The second involves Westcoast and B.C. Hydro, the main natural gas distributor in the Lower Mainland.

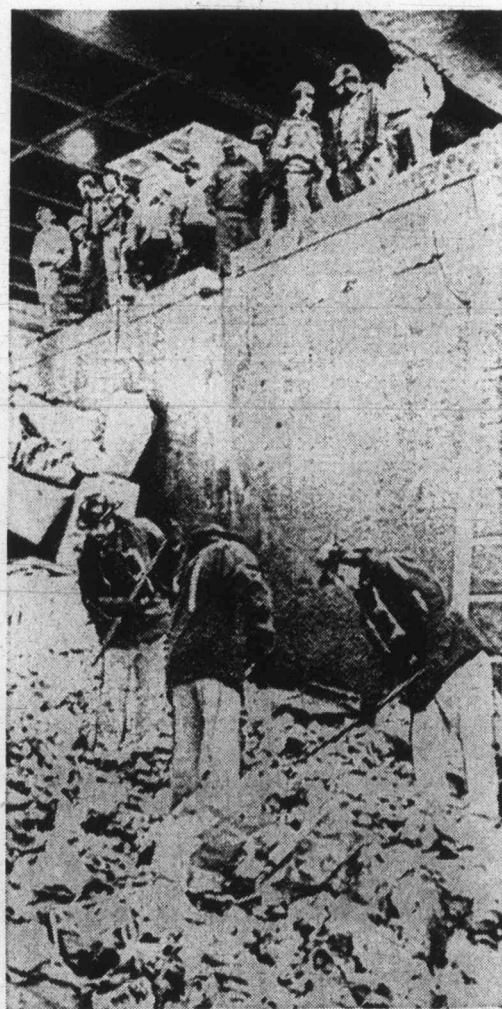

About 70 per cent of all gas produced in B.C. is exported. There are indications the export price could go to about 63 cents per thousand cubic feet based on an export formula that requires foreign buyers to pay 105 per cent of the going rate in the province.

This would involve an increase of about 81 per cent.

In the U.S., two officials of Northwest Pipeline Corp. of Salt Lake City, Utah, the company which purchases 62 per cent of all B.C. natural gas, said they were shocked at the announcement. They said they had gone to discuss security of supply of B.C. gas with NEB officials in Ottawa.

Northwest President John McMillan accused Westcoast

Something Smells

What's going on here? Well, a Seattle garbage man recovering from week-long drunk was blamed Wednesday for plight of these Seattle firemen shown in action Tuesday. Firemen found themselves probing tons of smelly garbage at refuse station after garbage man had reported he had dumped two women into pit along with load of refuse. Some 45 minutes was spent poking into garbage before it was determined story was just a hoax.

Sacking of Cox Illegal—Judge

'Begging' Sharp Rebuked

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. federal Judge John Sirica Wednesday gave President Nixon the go-ahead to make public any Watergate evidence he pleases — a tack Nixon reportedly is anxious to take to prove his innocence in this scandal.

But almost simultaneously, another federal judge ruled that the firing of special prosecutor Archibald Cox — done on Nixon's orders Oct. 20 because he pushed too hard to get secret presidential tapes and documents — was illegal.

There were these other developments in the Watergate case:

● Several Republican congressmen, after meeting with Nixon in the morning, said he is eager to make his story public and would release information from his private tapes and papers if Sirica approved.

● Sirica, chief judge of the U.S. District Court here who has been handling the case, filed a "memorandum" saying Nixon need not seek his approval before submitting any evidence to the grand jury or the public if he chooses.

● U.S. District Judge Gerhard Gesell ruled in a suit brought by Ralph Nader and three members of Congress that Cox had been "illegally discharged" by acting Attorney General Robert F. Bork.

● Senator Sam Ervin, chairman of the senate Watergate committee, turned down a reported offer from Nixon to meet with him and the committee vice-chairman, Howard Baker. "I'm not going to the White House without the entire committee," Ervin said.

● Officials of Ashland and Gulf Oil companies told the Ervin committee how they had bowed to pressures from Nixon campaign officials and illegally contributed $100,000 each from corporate funds to Nixon's re-election effort.

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian participation in the United Nations Emergency Forces was approved by the Commons Wednesday, but the Conservative external affairs critic launched his strongest attack yet on the government's foreign policy.

Before Claude Wagner (PC — St. Hyacinthe) began his attack, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said Canada has received a request for more men to provide air support for UNEF in the Middle East.

Wagner said Canada must be willing to serve on UNEF when asked, but should not beg as Sharp had done. Sharp had "rushed" down to the UN when Canadian involvement in the force came into question, he said.

SWEDISH 'N-DISASTER'

It Was No Mock Panic

STOCKHOLM (Reuter) — An inquiry began Wednesday into a Swedish radio broadcast of a mock nuclear disaster which caused panic in southern Swedish cities and in the Danish capital of Copenhagen.

Residents of the city of Malmö fled to underground shelters and jammed police and fire station switchboards with telephone calls after a children's program announced there had been an explosion at a new nuclear reactor being built nearby.

In the program, ambulance sirens wailed in the background, reporters said tens of thousands in the greater Copenhagen area were in deadly danger and an actor portraying the mayor of Malmö appealed to the population to seek refuge.

A Copenhagen newspaper reported that some Swedes fled by ferry to Denmark to escape the imagined holocaust.

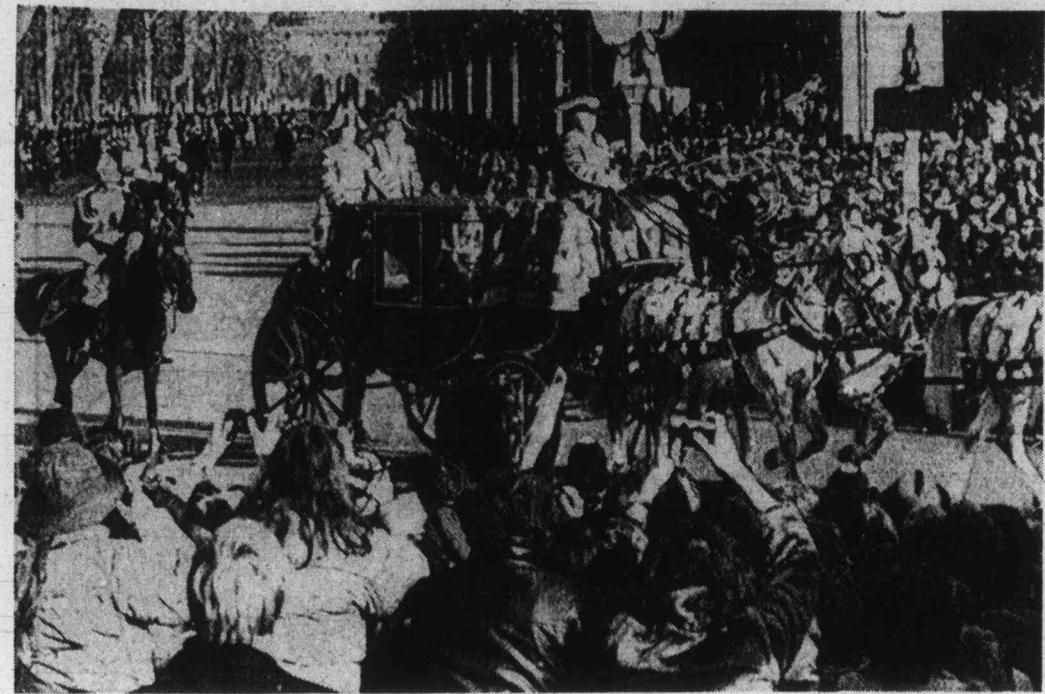

Later, the radio broadcast an explanation and an apology.

"We thought we had taken sufficient safeguards, but we obviously had not," commented program chief Stig Olin.

Bridal carriage returns to Buckingham Palace with royal newlyweds

Honeymoon in Barbados

LONDON (CP) — A happy and relaxed Princess Anne, now Mrs. Mark Phillips, spent her first honeymoon night at the home of her mother's cousin in suburban Richmond Park before flying to Barbados today for an 18-day cruise.

The wedding-night destination was to be a secret but court reporters said Wednesday that Anne and her new husband were at Thatched House Lodge, a white residence set in the rolling terrain of the royal park, home of Princess Alexandra.

They fly to Barbados today to board the royal yacht Britannia to cruise in the Caribbean before Mark takes up his duties as a military instructor.

The Queen and other members of the royal family joyfully hurled rose petals as the couple left Buckingham Palace in an open horse-drawn carriage — Anne in sapphire-blue velvet dress and jacket trimmed with white mink and a white mink hat and Phillips in a grey suit.

The moment marked the end of the biggest royal fiesta Britons have seen in years. The queen is expected to pick up the wedding tab estimated at $250,000.

Anne, Mark Cheered By Hysterical Crowd

After a short drive through the gathering November dusk, Anne and Mark transferred to an automobile at the back door of the Royal Chelsea Hospital, home of the famed scarlet-coated Chelsea pensioners.

Almost as if the weather were in league with the wedding organizers, it clouded over as soon as Anne and her handsome army officer had appeared on a Buckingham Palace balcony to hysterically cheering crowds — who chanted "We want Anne" and "We want Mark" and would not stop yelling until they came back a second time. The royal family also briefly joined the couple on the balcony.

Until then, it had been brilliant royal bride's weather for November, with sunshine and a blue sky over the jingling pageantry of coaches and scarlet-clad cavalry. Hundreds camped out overnight to get a good view of the processions and by 11 a.m., when the queen's procession left the palace for Westminster Abbey, up to 30,000 sightseers jammed Parliament Square, hanging on railings and waving tiny Union Jacks.

Often on recent royal occasions the crowds have been quiet, with just a few waving, but on Wednesday cheers rose from thousands of throats. Britons were determined to enjoy this splash of glamor before the threatened power cuts and strikes of winter took effect.

But for all the splendor, the gold-robed archbishop and clergy, the ranks of foreign royalty and the glittering military style of the wedding in 900-year-old Westminster Abbey, it was at heart a family affair. The queen has rarely seemed so unrestrainedly delighted as she was when leaving the abbey — happy on this day to be thoroughly upstaged by her daughter.

Television audiences round the world saw the 23-year-old princess, in a white silken Elizabethan gown with deep pointed sleeves and wearing a borrowed tiara from her grandmother, the Queen Mother, exchange a firm "I will" with 23-year-old Phillips.

The groom wore a glittering scarlet and gold tunic with skin-tight blue trousers and long spurs. He has previously appeared nervous in public speaking, but he spoke up without hesitation Wednesday as he pledged to endow "with all my worldly goods" Britain's most eligible heiress, fourth in line to the throne.

After they were pronounced man and wife by the Archbishop of Canterbury, Most Rev. Michael Ramsey — 69 Wednesday and soon to retire — the young couple knelt before the high altar. It was a solemn moment of dedication but they were plainly so happy in each other's company they seemed to forget all the surrounding pomp and leaned toward each other.

Prince Philip gave his daughter away, honoring his new son-in-law by wearing a field-marshal's uniform instead of his customary admiral's rig. Prince Charles, the bride's brother and heir to the throne wore the uniform of a serving naval lieutenant, with sword.

Even Picadilly Circus Affected

U.K. Takes Dim View

LONDON (AP) — Britain dimmed its street lighting and cut heating in public buildings Wednesday in emergency moves to meet a threatened shortage of energy.

The government's ban on street and floodlighting was effective at midnight but many firms simply turned off their advertising signs at closing time. Movies and theatres, however, kept their marquee lighting on until the deadline.

Picadilly Circus, the crossroads in the heart of the capital, was dim in the early evening but far from the blackout level of the Second World War. In nearby Trafalgar Square the floodlights on Nelson's Monument and the National Gallery were off but movie lighting was on.

The government ordered the ban on lighting and a 10-per-cent cut in heating in all public buildings and state-owned industries after declaring a state of national emergency Tuesday.

The action was taken to give the administration powers to deal with a refusal by coal miners and workers in the electricity-generating industry to work overtime. The refusal is part of a protest against wage freezes.

The government apparently held off on the lighting ban

until midnight because of the festivities involved with the wedding of Princess Anne, daughter of Queen Elizabeth, to Capt. Mark Phillips. There was also an international soccer game between England and Italy at London's Wembley Stadium and between Scotland and West Germany in Glasgow's Hampden Park.

Home Secretary Robert Carr told the House of Commons Tuesday the miners' ban on overtime was a bid to exhaust the nation's coal stocks through diminished production.

The workers are protesting the government's curbs on pay raises which limit increases to 7 per cent during the next 12 months and block the much higher pay claims from the unions in both industries.

Some Murderers Senator's Friends

OTTAWA (CP) — Senator Earl Hastings (L.-Alberta), who counts 30 convicted murderers among his friends, called Wednesday for abolition of all capital punishment.

He made the plea as the senate resumed consideration of the government's controversial bill to renew the ban on capital punishment except for killers of on-duty policemen and prison guards.

Hastings is honorary president of a club at the federal penitentiary in Drumheller, Alta., whose active members are all convicted murderers. He told of several cases where men whose sentences were commuted had become valuable citizens.

Marines in Peking Win the Action

Colonist-Los Angeles Times Service
PEKING — American marines have a long and colorful history in China, from the Boxer rebellion through the decades between world wars, and now they are back again in the U.S. liaison office set up this year.
They are kept about as low profile as possible — in civilian clothes, inside the office without side arms. Even at that, American diplomats wish they were not around at all. For the marines already have developed a reputation.

"Those marines have done more to set back Sino-American relations than anything I know," complained one U.S. official based in Washington.
American officials stationed here are puzzled by the remark, for they claim no scandalous behavior has occurred. But they admit that the Chinese are sensitive about the marine presence guarding the liaison office — the only foreign military men in China — and U.S. diplomats frankly try to discourage stories about the marines.

Requests by a correspondent to interview a marine — all of whom are enlisted and single — were refused. Similarly, requests to visit the marine quarters — a saloon — were turned aside.

Stories about the saloon, as most stories about marine heroics, are probably gilded but there is no doubt that it is reputedly the best action — and only action — in town.

Peking has no bars, no movies, no dancing places. The closest thing to entertainment are the revolutionary ballets like the White-Haired Girl performed Sunday night, in which the "lovers" move toward a climax only to sing instead that The Sun Is Rising. The Sun Is Mao Tse Tung.
The saloon is only a bar

with a small dance area built by the marines in the living and dining rooms of a three-bedroom apartment which six of them share in a diplomatic residence.
Chinese girls are strictly forbidden from consorting with foreigners, so girls from the secretarial staff of western embassies are usually the marines' dates.

Our Man from the Colonies Drops In for Tea

By GORDON HAMILTON
Colonist Duncan Bureau

DUNCAN — Only at high tea could it happen — it was no longer the year 1973 and I was no longer standing in a modern pancake house at Duncan covering a ceremonial tea being held here in honor of Wednesday's royal wedding. I was thrown back in time to the height of the British Empire and was addressing an English noblewoman.

Present at the tea were members of the Cowichan Valley's oldest and most British families, and between toasts to the royal couple were dashes of conversation about England, tradition, and life in the early days of the Cowichan Valley.

"Mr. Hamilton is from the Colonist," said my host.

"The colonies — how delightful," returned Mrs. Parker-Smith, her face reflecting her interest in meeting somebody who had actually returned from those far-flung corners of the empire.

And for that moment, the barriers of time and circumstance crumbled. I really was from the colonies, and was in no hurry to correct the mistake.

"And what part of the colonies are you from?" she inquired.

While I was preparing an answer, basking in my newly-acquired glory, my host spoke again. This time Mrs. Parker-

Smith heard him correctly, and the fantasy ended.

But that such an incident could take place illustrates the strong British sentiments that exist in the Cowichan Valley, sentiments that were aroused by Wednesday's wedding.

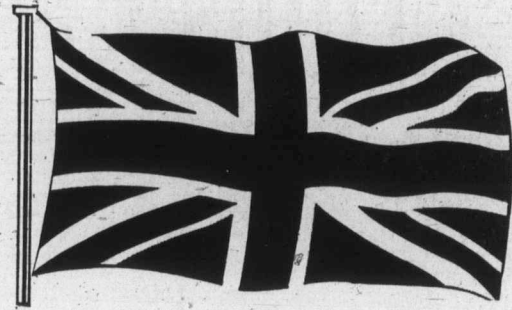

"I don't think events such as this should be ignored completely. If we ignore them, the royal family not only becomes downgraded, but could become extinct within a few years. These are my feelings," said Michael Crosbie, the owner-manager of Smitty's Pancake House, the site of Wednesday's tea.

Crosbie, with co-operation from the two Cowichan chapters of the International Order of the Daughters of the Empire, decided to put in the tea, which ran from 3 to 5 p.m. All local digni-ties attended, and a giant scroll, signed by the 300 people present, was drawn up, offering congratulations to the royal couple. Crosbie said it would be forwarded to Buckingham Palace.

The day of celebration was also promoted by the Cowichan United Appeal, with all proceeds from the tea and half the proceeds from the pancake house for the rest of the day, being donated to the appeal.

Tea was served from silver pots into china cups. There were crumpets, scones, butter tarts and, of course, lots of strawberry jam. The banquet hall was decorated with flags and a large portrait of the princess hung from the wall, completing the royalist atmosphere.

Dispute Closes Alberni Sawmill

PORT ALBERNI — Negotiations were continuing Wednesday night in an effort to reopen MacMillan Bloedel's Somass sawmill and shingle operation here which was shut down following a series of walkouts and suspensions that started Saturday.

About 1,000 members of Local 185 of the International Woodworkers of America were idled in the shutdown.

Some 60 maintenance workers at the mill were suspended Saturday after they left their jobs to protest about a foreman performing a tradesman's duties. Boom crews and carrier drivers walked off the job Wednesday, apparently after they were unable to get details of a meeting between company and union officials on the suspended maintenance workers.

As a result of that walkout, the drivers and boom crews were also suspended and operations at the mill ground to a halt.

Sex Acts Net Man 6½ Years

PARKSVILLE — A North Island resident, Jack Roy Wiggins, 27, has been sentenced to 6½ years in prison after pleading guilty to three charges arising from an incident north of Nanaimo last month.

Charges of rape, carnal knowledge and indecent assault were laid against Wiggins following an incident involving a 12-year-old girl.

Crown prosecutor Alan Filmer of Nanaimo said the girl was picked up by Wiggins as she was hitchhiking on the Island Highway.

Wiggins was given terms of 6½ years on the rape and carnal knowledge charges and 3½ years on the charge of indecent assault. All terms are to be served concurrently.

Wiggins was sentenced by Judge T. G. Bowen-Cothurst.

Potters, Painters Prepare

Cowichan Valley potters and Maple Bay painters are busily preparing for their annual Christmas show and sale, to be held next Wednesday at St. Peter's Hall in Duncan. Show runs from 2 to 9 p.m.

Building To Be Razed

Youth Centre Loses Home

DUNCAN — The old municipal hall on Canada Avenue along with other buildings in its vicinity will soon be razed and the Cowichan Option Society will no longer have a drop-in centre there.

A society delegation at this week's council meeting, having been aware for some time that a new development is being planned for the area, was told that council also would be unable to rent the Arcadian school to the society. Delegation spokesman Jack Hutton, director of the provincial mental health branch at Duncan, was given to understand that a business already is using the old school as a warehouse.

Earlier this year the society rented the old municipal hall for a six-month period. This period expired a few weeks ago and now the society will have to vacate the building by the end of this month because the developer will go ahead with his plans.

Hutton told council that the society would need some space to carry on the program which, although frequently criticized, has proved successful in reaching young people.

Council decided to have further discussions with North

Cowichan council members regarding the use of the old curling rink which North Cowichan would be willing to rent on a monthly basis. Duncan and North Cowichan earlier bought the curling rink jointly.

Ald. Mike Caljouw said the building should be used but the proposed liability insurance of $200,000 would be too low.

Hunt for Fisherman Stalled at Ucluelet

UCLUELET — The search for a 65-year-old Nanaimo fisherman lost en route to his home has hit a brick wall here.

Charles Kaneva left Tofino Nov. 1 and a search and rescue investigation has found that Kaneva was seen in Ucluelet the next day.

But there the trail for the fisherman peters out.

Bill White, a member on the Tofino search and rescue vessel, said he spoke to several people who saw Kaneva's boat tied up in the Ucluelet area.

White said one fisherman who had spoken to Kaneva told him Kaneva had planned to leave for Nanaimo Nov. 2.

White said a fisherman fishing for cod on the outer reef area near Ucluelet saw Kaneva's boat go by around Nov. 5. The fisherman said Kaneva was heading towards Victoria at the time.

Beyond that point, search a pump for the period while Centennial Heights drainage work is being done. The contractor meanwhile has started the $98,000 project which will be completed in about six weeks. Paskin said that during a heavy flood last year it had been impossible to rent a large pump anywhere on Vancouver Island and that this extra precaution of renting a pump now should be taken.

Officials have been unable to find any trace of Kaneva. Ucluelet is 20 miles from Tofino.

White said he was puzzled over the time lapse between the sightings reported by the two people.

Search officials in Victoria said the sea and air search for Kaneva has been called off since the search area had been thoroughly covered. However, the search is still going on by way of marine broadcasts to boats in the area.

Search officials estimated that the trip from Ucluelet to Nanaimo would take Kaneva four days.

Kaneva, who has been fishing in the Tofino-Ucluelet area for 10 years, has a heart condition which requires he take medicine daily and he was reported to have medication on board sufficient for three days.

His vessel is the Millie K.

Parks Branch Study:

$2 Million Cost For Cycling Path

By BARBARA McLINTOCK
Colonist Legislature Staff

Development of a proposed cycling trail from Victoria to Lake Cowichan could cost as much as $2 million, a parks branch study into the proposal has found.

And the development could bring the parks branch into conflict with the Victoria Pacific Railway Company, the highways department, the provincial transit bureau, the Greater Victoria Water Board and the B.C. Forest Service.

Moreover, it is based upon use of the old CNR railway track — a line the railway has not yet officially abandoned.

Do It Anyway

But despite these disadvantages, "the adoption in principle of this proposed parkway is highly desirable and therefore firmly recommended," the study concludes.

Recreation Minister Jack Radford, making the study public, said he would set up an inter-agency task force "to try to eliminate any conflicts there might be if the parkway is established."

Radford said that since the idea of the cycling-hiking trail along the CNR right-of-way was first made public in July, he had received more than 7,000 letters from members of the public, almost all of them in favor of the trail.

Only 59 Miles

The original concept of the trail was to have it stretch 82 miles from downtown Victoria to Youbou. But the study notes that at the moment the trail could be built only along the 59 miles from Victoria to Deerholme because the CNR still uses its line beyond that point.

Later, however, the study suggests that the extension could go not only to Youbou, but along existing railway grades past Nitinat Lake and Port Alberni to Campbell River.

B.C. manager of the CNR, A. E. Street, has recommended to his head office in Montreal that the Victoria-Deerholme section of the line be abandoned. However, says the study, "it is not known what level of priority will be assigned to this recommendation by the CNR head office in its railway abandonment applications to the Board of Transport Commissioners."

Press Railway

If the government favors early establishment of the trail, Radford should urge the CNR and the transport commissioners to hurry the abandonment process, the study suggests.

Costs of developing the parkway will include the acquisition of the land, building an asphalt or limestone trail, landscaping and building 300 picnic sites and 150 rustic campsites.

Cost of the land for the entire 82-mile strip might be between $500,000 and $1 million, the study estimates, between $380,000 and $730,000 for the right-of-way from Victoria to Deerholme.

Perpetual Use

However, "because the CNR is a crown corporation, having long benefited from the exploitation of B.C.'s resources, it is strongly recommended that the federal government be urged to relinquish the CNR's holdings on Vancouver Island for a nominal sum, and thus permit its use by the public as a provincial parkway in perpetuity."

Cost of an eight-foot cycling path would be about $10,000 a mile, while the campsites and picnic site developments would cost about $135,000.

Tourist Train

Conflict with the Victoria Pacific Railway Company would come because the company leases from the railway a small section of line in Colwood to operate a recreational tourist steam train during the summer. The company plans to expand this operation.

The study recommends that to overcome this conflict, the B.C. government should encourage the CPR to accommodate the Victoria Pacific train on its E and N tracks "as token consideration of this aspect of our national heritage."

Conflict with the highways department might come because some of the corridor would be useful for widening highways, and the transit bureau is looking at the right-of-way as a line for "future rapid transit."

Solve Problems

However, alternatives could be found for these groups, the study says, and encouragement of cycling might "offset some of the apparent need for wider and faster roads."

Danger of forest fires and of water pollution of Sooke Lake could also be solved by regular patrols of the line and by proper fencing separating the lake from the trail.

Once these problems were overcome, said the study, the trail would serve well both residents and tourists and would provide a model for similar developments in other areas of B.C. and Canada.

Trustees Call For Cool To Save Fuel

COURTENAY — Courtenay school trustees are concerned about the amount of fuel waste in schools and have decided to have thermostats set at temperatures 10 degrees lower.

Trustees agreed Tuesday evening to have superintendent of schools Reg Cox call a special meeting of principals later this week to emphasize the importance of the role they must play in encouraging the fuel conservation—especially when it is becoming a national concern.

Fuel conservation was discussed by trustees after director of properties Stan Rowe advised that "there is a great waste of fuel in the school district schools."

Rowe went on to say that the "dress habits of staff and pupils are such that it is expected that all schools will be at about 70 degrees when personnel arrive in the morning about 8 o'clock. Within one hour of commencement of school the heat generated by people, lighting and solar effect results in a temperature rise of eight to 10 degrees, so windows and doors are opened."

Rowe said that many of the schools have very simple heating systems which, make individual room control difficult.

"An open window in rooms containing the thermostat, controlling several rooms results in excessive overheating of all those rooms."

Rowe told board members that he made a point of checking schools in the past week and "without an exception, windows were open all over the schools no matter how cold it was outside. This was especially so in the larger schools with hot water heating."

"The furnace continues to pump out heat yet the windows are opened," he said. "If staff and pupils were expected to dress for a temperature of 60 degrees first thing in the morning and if staff could be educated to be conscious of conditions in other teaching areas, substantial saving in fuel oil consumption could be realized."

Rowe warned trustees that there could be a backlash from pupils and teachers to their decision because "people's tastes vary so much to temperature. Pupils and teachers are dressing the same as they do in the summer."

Weather Slows Seiner-Savers

HORNEY ISLAND — The B.C. Packers Ltd. seiner Ellen C remained stuck on rocks in front of Forts Cove here Wednesday night despite two attempts by salvage crews to float her off.

The seiner, which ran aground Monday, had been expected to be freed Wednesday with little difficulty, but crew members said they were hampered by heavy weather and poor tides.

Salvage crews spent most of the day repairing a 20-foot gash in the hull of the vessel, apparently caused by the rough weather battering the boat against the rocks.

The last attempt to refloat the boat was made at 7 p.m.

Wednesday during high tide. However, a crewman said the tide reached only about 13 feet.

Crews were going to try again at 10 a.m. today when the tide is expected to reach 15 feet or more.

Meanwhile, two big packers sent by the company from Vancouver were standing by to assist in the salvage operation.

Each carries a crew of five, as does the Ellen C, so at least 15 men are tied up waiting for seiner to float free. The crew of the Ellen C was removed safely from the vessel by local fishermen when the vessel ran onto the rocks Monday evening.

Errors Costly to Canadiens As Bruins Pad Division Lead

Only nine members remain from the team which won the Stanley Cup in 1972 but Boston Bruins have established themselves as the team to catch in the National Hockey League.

They moved five points ahead of the closest East Division pursuit on Wednesday night, edging the defending-champion Montreal Canadiens for the second time in less than a week, this time by 4-3.

Good goalkeeping from Gilles Gilbert, persistent checking and two glaring defensive errors by Canadiens combined to give Bruins the victory although they didn't get a point from Phil Esposito and Bobby Orr.

Canadiens, who had Frank Mahovlich marking his return to the lineup with his finest performance of the season, held their own in the first two periods and then lost it while managing a third-period edge in play.

Going into the final 20 minutes at 2-2, Canadiens couldn't make it back after mistakes by defencemen Serge Savard and Pierre Bouchard, were turned into a 4-2 Boston lead.

Rookie Andre Savard broke the tie when namesake Serge Savard ventured too far into the Boston zone in pursuit of the puck and the Bruins got a three-on-one break. Then, at 10:10, Bouchard made one of those careless passes Canadiens so often come up with in their own zone, and Ken Hodge calmly accepted the unexpected and beat Wayne Thomas on the short side with a quick shot.

And that wasn't the extent of the Canadiens' contribution to defeat. Boston got the 2-0 goal while playing shorthanded in the first period, Greg Shepard taking the puck from the Canadiens' contribution to defeat.

Good goalkeeping from Gilles Gilbert, persistent checking and two glaring defensive errors by Canadiens combined to give Bruins the victory although they didn't get a point from Phil Esposito and Bobby Orr.

Canadiens, who pulled even on power-play goals by Cournoyer in the first period, and Mahovlich, in the second period, were outlucked twice and out-ruled once in the comeback try that failed.

Redmond's second goal, and 10th of the season, came at 11:29 of the third period and pulled his club even. Henry Bouchard's winning goal, and Delvecchio with his dug the puck from under Gilbert and pushed it over the line just after Hodge scored. It was the third straight defeat for the Stanley Cup champions, and it dropped them into third place.

Moving ahead were the Buffalo Sabres, who so far have refused to buckle from the injuries which removed Gil Perreault and Jim Schoenfeld from their lineup.

Now 3-2-1 since the loss of their two young stars, the Sabres moved into Atlanta and ended the Flames' unbeaten run at seven games by scoring a 3-1 decision.

Also on the move are Detroit Red Wings, who kept Alex Delvecchio the only unbeaten coach in the NHL by coming from behind to edge New York Islanders, 4-3, in a Detroit game which produced 122 minutes in penalties, 84 of them in the first period.

It followed, of course, that power-play goals counted heavily. Mickey Redmond providing the difference by scoring twice with Islanders shorthanded.

Redmond's second goal, and 10th of the season, came at 11:29 of the third period and pulled his club even. Henry Bouchard's winning goal, and Delvecchio with his third straight victory four minutes later.

New York Rangers and Chicago Black Hawks, both struggling for expected respectability, fought to a 4-4 tie in New York. And in the other game not played on the West Coast, Vancouver Canucks continued to have road troubles, taking a 6-3 beating from Minnesota North Stars.

Goals by Bruce MacGregor and Sheldon Kannegieser brought Rangers from 2-4 in the third period.

In Bloomington, Bill Golds-worthy and Danny Grant both scored their ninth and 10th goals of the season to keep Canucks down. North Stars, scoring twice on power plays, were 4-0 by the seventh minute of the second period.

Goals by Bruce MacGregor and Sheldon Kannegieser brought Rangers from 2-4 in the third period.

In Bloomington, Bill Golds-worthy and Danny Grant both scored their ninth and 10th goals of the season to keep Canucks down. North Stars, scoring twice on power plays, were 4-0 by the seventh minute of the second period.

Salaries To Be Based on Average

Sooke Teachers Settle First

Sooke's 325 school teachers became the first in the province on Monday to settle their 1974 contract — but they were buying a pig in a poke.

They won't know until Jan. 1 just what kind of wages they have settled for.

The settlement hammered out Monday — three days before the deadline for arbitration — will give them provincial average wages.

Sooke teachers' negotiation chairman Andre de Hoog said that when all provincial settlements are listed by Dec. 31, the B.C. Teachers' Federation in Vancouver will average the various wage rates and send those averages to Sooke.

De Hoog said as far as he knows Sooke has the first settlement although he expects that more will be announced today and Thursday.

Meanwhile in Victoria teachers and trustees were trading charges regarding their salary negotiations.

Bob Mitchell, president of the Greater Victoria Teachers' Association, said school trustees are deliberately trying to create a disaster situation in local bargaining so that they can win their fight for a provincial bargaining body.

With negotiations across the province due to go to arbitration Thursday, where no settlements have been reached, Mitchell said: "I get the feeling we are not really negotiating this year in good faith, but really trying to create such a disaster situation that provincial bargaining will become a necessity."

Greater Victoria school board chairman Peter Bunn said that, for the first time, trustees in all 74 provincial school districts are hanging together in a unified approach.

"I am suggesting that finally after many years school boards of this province have had the guts to say so far and no more."

"It just cannot go on," added Bunn. "Ten to 12 per cent — this is just so much nonsense."

Bunn said that in their first approach, the teachers in Victoria had asked for a 16 per cent increase — and in some categories an increase of 35 per cent.

"No way we could accept this — they wanted dental plans and God knows what — it was out of this world."

The board's latest offer, according to Bunn was about 8.5 per cent, with the teachers still asking between 11 and 13 per cent.

"We would be prepared to go up a little," said Bunn.

He said the board had put $400,000 into improved education this year—he listed a program that included lowering the teacher-pupil ratio by hiring 50 more teachers while the pupil population has dropped by 500, and hiring more special counsellors.

Bunn did not think the negotiating committee's position really represented the teacher's position. "In their hearts the teachers know that 8 to 9 per cent is a very reasonable increase at this time."

Negotiation meetings are continuing, however and Bunn said a settlement with Greater Victoria teachers could still be reached if the teachers would be reasonable.

Mitchell said Victoria teachers are already well below the average paid to provincial teachers and that the 8.9 per cent increase awarded last year proved inadequate to cover the rising cost of living.

According to the Public Schools Act, teacher salary negotiations must go to arbitration if contracts are not settled by Nov. 15. But Mitchell pointed out that does not mean that negotiations cannot continue while arbitration boards are being set up.

However, he said, appearances are that there will be mass arbitration in the province.

"In Victoria, we have had improved teacher-board relationships and I had great hopes for negotiations this year."

But, said Mitchell, the provincial trustees association made its annual call for province-wide negotiations, and that "seemed to throw a monkey-wrench into the works."

The teachers' associations, said Mitchell, bargain separately, although he conceded there is probably a certain similarity of demand since teachers in the province have similar problems, and most of them rely upon the federation for statistical research.

Bicycle Trail Fencing 'Health Need'

The proposed Victoria-Lake Cowichan bicycle trail should not go ahead without proper fencing for Sooke Lake, Victoria's senior medical health officer, Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, said Tuesday.

He told a Greater Victoria health board meeting that the fate of the proposed trail, which runs along the entire eastern shore of Sooke Lake, should depend on whether "there's enough money to spend to put fences up."

He reiterated a fear expressed earlier by the Greater Victoria water board that great numbers of cyclists would pollute the area's supply of water by bathing and camping in and around Sooke Lake.

Whitbread acknowledged that the public already had limited access to the watershed through use of the old Leechtown road which follows the lake's eastern shore. However he told the meeting the public was not "encouraged to use that way."

He also noted cyclists would not get much exercise by using the proposed 82-mile route along the abandoned CNR right-of-way, because it was so "flat."

If it was exercise cyclists wanted they'd do better to use the normal up-and-down road system.

Board member Harry Graham told the meeting that cycling "may prove to be a fad that will die out... like so many fads in the past."

But Gordon Ewan thought it was a "Wonderful route" and an "excellent idea" which he hoped would be feasible on health and economic grounds.

Fears were also expressed at the meeting that the Saanich peninsula could find itself without enough acute care beds if the new extended-care Saanich Peninsula Hospital, scheduled to open soon, was not expanded according to original plans.

Victoria Area Hit By Minor Tremor

The Victoria area was hit by a minor earth tremor Tuesday afternoon but no damage was reported.

The quake, which registered about two on the Richter scale, occurred about 5:30 p.m.

Dr. William Milne of the seismology department at the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory estimated the centre of the disturbance was about 10 to 15 miles east of Victoria, in the San Juan Islands area.

'Bulldozer Approach' Unacceptable

Ottawa Ends Project Aid

MONTREAL (CP) — Cities will no longer receive federal aid for rebuilding projects that decimate urban cores in the guise of modernization, Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford said Tuesday.

"This bulldozer approach is no longer acceptable," Basford told 450 delegates at the Canadian Conference on Housing Rehabilitation.

The minister told the conference sponsored by the Canadian Council on Social Development: "Municipalities that consider covering 10 acres with blacktop for a handful of merchants and a bank, calling it a shopping centre, won't get any money as long as I'm minister. We're looking for worthwhile projects."

He said provincial govern-

Students Scoff Junta Leaders

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Demonstrators at three college campuses — some throwing rotten fruit — prevented

ments have not participated in two new improvement programs with a $100 million budget.

He said his department had been told the allotment for the Neighborhood Improvement Program and Residential Rehabilitation Program was 'modest', insufficient for needs, yet virtually the whole sum lies unspent as the fiscal year draws to a close.

Basford said he would meet with responsible provincial ministers within the next few weeks to urge them to sign agreements.

Under the programs, the federal government pays half the cost of acquiring and clearing land for low-income housing and for social and recreational facilities.

Toronto Sun Fights UIC

TORONTO (UPI) — The Toronto Sun, a morning newspaper, said Wednesday it would not pay the 40 per cent increase Jan. 1 for unemployment insurance, and had asked its lawyers to study means of challenging the government in the courts.

It said the Trudeau government "chickened out" in allowing a bill on the unemployment insurance commission to die, UIC costs this year would reach $2.5 billion, and "the rip-off continues."

Subsidies Freeze Lifted On Eastern Fishboats

OTTAWA (UPI) — The freeze on subsidies for new fishing vessels on the Atlantic coast has been lifted but new regulations have been implemented to protect over-exploited species, environment Minister Jack Davis announced Wednesday.

Davis told the House of Commons that while the three-month freeze on subsidies which took effect in August had been lifted, the 35 per cent subsidies would no longer be given for vessels in-involved in fishing lobster, scallop, salmon, herring and snow crab.

He said the emphasis would be on modernization of the present fleet through replacement and conversion of vessels and encouragement of greater efforts in areas where fish were plentiful.

Fishermen and fishing companies would be encouraged especially to take up Canada's international quotas for cod in northern areas.

The new regulations, effective immediately, affect both registration and licensing of vessels and equipment and crews.

Strike Notice Dropped At Ford

DETROIT (UPI) — The United Auto Workers Wednesday cancelled its national strike deadline at General Motors Corp. next Monday, but said there will be a number of local "mini-strikes" while negotiations continue on a national contract.

The union's announcement came hours after it declared its new contract with Ford Motor Co. ratified despite rejection of the pact by skilled tradesmen, a small minority of the total Ford work force. The skilled workers claimed veto power under the UAW constitution.

UAW president Leonard Woodcock said the strike deadline for 420,000 GM workers was called off to "remove the temptation" from GM's mind that it could bankrupt the union during a strike. The union's strike fund stands at $71 million, just over half the 1970 level when the UAW struck GM for 67 days.

Woodcock said the union strategy would be to let its old contract, extended since Sept. 14 on a day-to-day basis, expire Monday. This will allow local unions to "pursue their own course" and possibly strike over local issues.

Woodcock would not predict how many local strikes there would be Monday but said the union would have enough control over its members to get them back on the job after a few days and avoid a nationwide shutdown.

He said this course of action had nothing to do with the trouble the union has had in gaining full acceptance of the Ford agreement by the membership. He said he hoped to avoid a strike that would harm the nation's economy.

Union Split 'Forced'

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadian members of the International Union of United Brewery Workers of America have disaffiliated themselves from the union in reaction to the union's amalgamation with the Teamsters Union.

The disaffiliation came Tuesday when representatives of the 12,000 Canadian members said they saw the fusing of their union with the Teamsters as an abandonment by the international union.

The Brewery Workers-Teamsters amalgamation came in Cincinnati last week. Claude Thomson, legal adviser of the Canadian section of the brewery workers union, said the move here was not a bid by the Canadians "to turn their back on the international union."

Rather, he said, the Canadians "find themselves in a situation which forces them... to survive independently rather than to submit to the authority of the Teamsters Union."

The Canadian membership, in an earlier meeting in Toronto, has already set up the structure for an independent union.

A meeting is planned for Winnipeg in January to ratify a constitution and elect permanent officers.

1,340 Cars Recalled

TORONTO (CP) — Volkswagen Canada Ltd. is recalling about 1,340 Audi Foxes to check the bolts holding the rear wheel backing plates and replace them if necessary.

The company said the cars involved, manufactured between February and July of 1973, might have received damage to the bolts during loading aboard ship in Germany.

Ottawa Calms U.S. Oil Fear

NEW YORK (UPI) — Trade Minister Alastair Gillespie promised U.S. businessmen Wednesday that Canada will not bow to any Arab pressures to reduce oil products exports to the United States.

And in Ottawa, Energy Minister Donald Macdonald denied Wednesday night U.S. reports that American-owned oil was being unduly delayed in shipment through Canada.

Gillespie's comments underlined Prime Minister Tru-

deau's statement in the Commons Tuesday that "we will not alter our foreign policy or our good relationship with the Americans under any pressure from outside."

"Despite our own energy problems and some not-too-subtle pressures from some of our own foreign suppliers, Canada has continued and will continue to do what we can to help the United States meet its energy needs," Gillespie said in a speech to the U.S. national foreign trade convention in New York.

"To those who would question the capacity of Canada to withstand political pressures from other countries, pressures that would try to influence our foreign policy or how we choose our friends, let there be no doubt about Canada's determination to continue to supply her traditional trading partners and friends," Gillespie said.

"Canada does not, and will not, hold her friendships up for ransom."

The minister also stressed, however, that the government will ensure domestic oil needs are met before exporting surpluses to the U.S.

Referring in particular to reports from Detroit and Buffalo that shipments were being held up in Canada, Macdonald said in Ottawa:

"There are no known cases of any undue delay in such shipments."

However, he stressed the distinction between authorized exports or transshipments of U.S.-owned oil and the demands filed each month by prospective U.S. customers for shipments of Canadian oil products.

He said it was "long-standing Canadian policy" that the National Energy Board only permits exports of oil which it

Economic Council Warns:

Social Payments Fanning Inflation

● Grocery prices down; living cost still up, Page 41.

OTTAWA (UPI) — Government payments to individuals, from welfare to old age pensions, are growing at nearly twice the sustainable rate and should be curbed, the Economic Council of Canada said Wednesday.

Council chairman Andre Reynaud said the advisory body's analysis of the economy showed this was the one area where government policies were out of line with the economic guidelines proposed by the council last year.

"Transfer payments in the last two years have been growing at nearly 20 per cent a year, and this clearly cannot be sustained," he told a news conference. "We think there must be some room for a reduction in the rate of increase."

He said the increases, running at nearly 20 per cent the past two years compared to the council's recommendation of 10 per cent, would not lead to "an overnight catastrophe" but in the long run would force higher taxes, inflation and cutbacks in other government programs.

Reynaud said the council was not recommending cutbacks in specific programs but was urging that $5 or $6 billion be trimmed from the expected payments of $56 billion over the next three years.

He said the council's function was to call the public's attention to the situation so governments and their constituents would be aware of

Egyptian and Israeli generals agreed in a desert meeting on a prisoner exchange and other issues, with the prisoners to begin going home this morning. The generals sealed the deal by shaking hands and swigging whisky toasts straight from the bottle.

The prisoners were to be flown between Israel and Egypt via Cyprus, a United Nations spokesman said in Cairo. The exchange is expected to take six to eight days.

Israel apparently holds about 30 times as many prisoners as Egypt.

The accord, reached Wednesday in a tent on the road to Cairo, wrapped up five of the six clauses of the United States-sponsored truce agreement signed last Sunday.

The two sides have yet to agree on starting talks regarding proposed withdrawal to the ceasefire lines of Oct. 22, the date the first UN call went out to stop shooting.

Other points settled Wednesday, the UN spokesman said in Cairo, were:

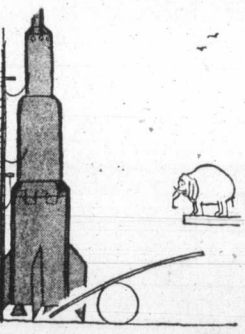

● The turning over to UN emergency forces Israeli checkpoints on the road between Cairo and the city of Suez.

● Free flow of relief supplies to the city of Suez, an encircled Egyptian city on the west of the Suez Canal at the southern terminus of the waterway, and evacuation of wounded and civilians from the city.

● Shipments of non-military supplies to Egypt's 3rd Army, encircled on both banks of the canal in the area of the city of Suez.

Skylab 3 Launch No Energy Saver

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — The launch of three Skylab 3 astronauts on Friday will consume great gulps of energy at a time when the rest of the United States is desperately trying to conserve it. (See also Page 59.)

The Saturn IB rocket will require 41,500 gallons of a kerosene-type fuel known as RP1, and the second stage will burn 64,000 gallons of liquid hydrogen to boost the craft into orbit.

Mission Control at the Johnson Space Centre near here will operate around the clock throughout the 85-day mission, using more than 2,000 kilowatt-hours of power each hour.

U.S. Customers Upset By B.C. Gas Increase

Major U.S. importers of B.C. natural gas expressed shock and dismay Wednesday over announcement of increases in the wholesale and export price of the gas.

Their reactions came as two agreements were filed with the National Energy Board in Ottawa, raising the wholesale price of natural gas within B.C. to 58 cents a thousand cubic feet from 32 cents.

One agreement is between Westcoast Transmission Ltd., the primary natural gas carrier in the province, and B.C. Petroleum Corp., an agency set up by B.C. legislation proclaimed last week.

The second involves Westcoast and B.C. Hydro, the main natural gas distributor in the Lower Mainland.

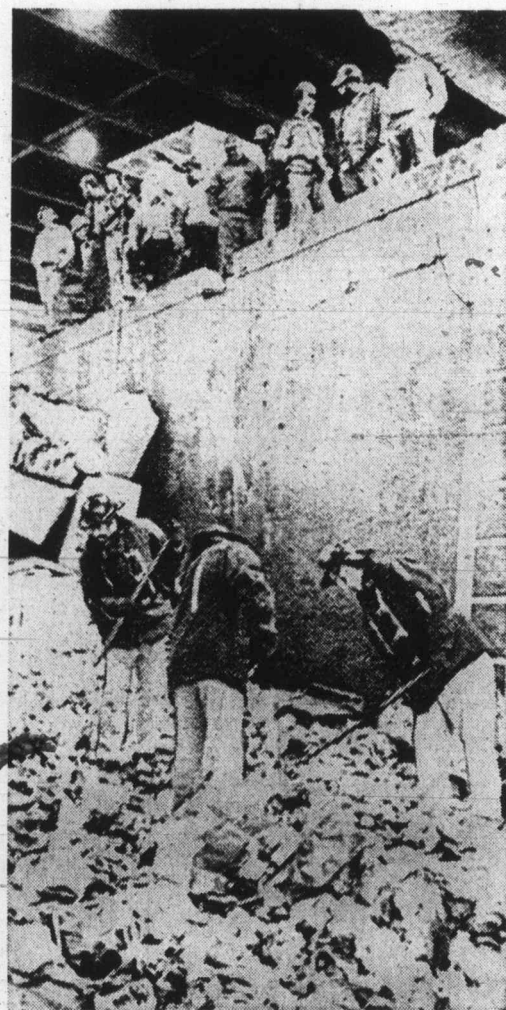

About 70 per cent of all gas produced in B.C. is exported. There are indications the export price could go to about 63 cents per thousand cubic feet based on an export formula that requires foreign buyers to pay 105 per cent of the going rate in the province.

This would involve an increase of about 81 per cent.

In the U.S., two officials of Northwest Pipeline Corp. of Salt Lake City, Utah, the company which purchases 62 per cent of all B.C. natural gas, said they were shocked at the announcement. They said they had gone to discuss security of supply of B.C. gas with NEB officials in Ottawa.

Northwest president John McMillan accused Westcoast

Something Smells

What's going on here? Well, a Seattle garbage man recovering from week-long drunk was blamed Wednesday for plight of these Seattle firemen shown in action Tuesday. Firemen found themselves probing tons of smelly garbage at refuse station after garbage man had reported he had dumped two women into pit along with load of refuse. Some 45 minutes was spent poking into garbage before it was determined story was just a hoax.

Sacking of Cox Illegal—Judge

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. federal Judge John Sirica Wednesday gave President Nixon the go-ahead to make public any Watergate evidence he pleases — a tack Nixon reportedly is anxious to take to prove his innocence in this scandal.

But almost simultaneously, another federal judge ruled that the firing of special prosecutor Archibald Cox — done on Nixon's orders Oct. 20 because he pushed too hard to get secret presidential tapes and documents — was illegal.

There were these other developments in the Watergate case:

● Several Republican congressmen, after meeting with Nixon in the morning, said he is eager to make his story public and would release information from his private tapes and papers if Sirica approved.

● Sirica, chief judge of the U.S. District Court here who has been handling the case, filed a "memorandum" saying Nixon need not seek his approval before submitting any evidence to the grand jury or the public if he chooses.

● U.S. District Judge Gerhard Gesell ruled in a suit brought by Ralph Nader and three members of Congress that Cox had been "illegally discharged" by acting Attorney-General Robert Bork.

● Senator Sam Ervin, Chairman of the senate Watergate committee, turned down a reported offer from Nixon to meet with him and the committee vice-chairman, Howard Baker. "I'm not going to the White House without the entire committee," Ervin said.

● Officials of Ashland and Gulf oil companies told the Ervin committee how they had bowed to pressures from Nixon campaign officials and illegally contributed $100,000 each from corporate funds to Nixon's re-election effort.

'Begging' Sharp Rebuked

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian participation in the United Nations Emergency Forces was approved by the Commons Wednesday, but the Conservative external affairs critic launched his strongest attack yet on the government's foreign policy.

Before Claude Wagner (PC—St. Hyacinthe) began his attack, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said Canada has received a request for more men to provide air support for UNEF in the Middle East.

Wagner said Canada must be willing to serve on UNEF when asked, but should not beg as Sharp had done. Sharp had "rushed" down to the UN when Canadian involvement in the force came into question, he said.

SWEDISH 'N-DISASTER'

It Was No Mock Panic

STOCKHOLM (Reuters) — An inquiry began Wednesday into a Swedish radio broadcast of a mock nuclear disaster which caused panic in southern Swedish cities and in the Danish capital of Copenhagen.

Residents of the city of Malmö flocked to underground shelters and jammed police and fire station switchboards with telephone calls after a children's program announced there had been an explosion at a new nuclear reactor being built nearby.

In the program ambulance sirens wailed in the background, reporters said tens of thousands in the greater Copenhagen area were in deadly danger and an actor portraying the mayor of Malmö appealed to the population to seek refuge.

A Copenhagen newspaper reported that some Swedes fled by ferry to Denmark to escape the imagined holocaust.

Later, the radio broadcast an explanation and an apology.

"We thought we had taken sufficient safeguards, but we obviously had not," commented program chief Stig Olin.
